

We make it easy

This Bank encourages the useful habit of economy—making it easy for everybody to save money by opening savings accounts.

We invite especially the savings of young men who intend to rise in the world—the savings of workingmen, employees and salaried persons who desire to provide against accident, sickness and old age.

No matter how small your account you will receive the same polite and careful attention as if it were the largest in the Bank.

ANNOUNCE CANDIDACY.

Burgess H. Spinney, East Weymouth
Young Man in Line for Representative.

BURGESS H. SPINNEY

Burgess H. Spinney announces his candidacy for the House of Representatives this week. In his announcement Mr. Spinney has the following to say:

"In announcing my candidacy for the House of Representatives from Weymouth, would say that I was born in Weymouth Landing, the son of Abbott L. and Ella M. Spinney, and have lived in East Weymouth twenty-five years. I attended the Weymouth schools and upon graduation entered the brokerage business in Boston, in which business I am still engaged.

I have always taken a great interest in the politics of the town and have served on the Republican Town Committee, of which I am still a member."

M. E. HAWES CANDIDATE.

Ex-Representative Again in Field for Office.

M. E. Hawes is a candidate for Representative for the Fifth Norfolk District which is now, as it has been for ten years, the town of Weymouth. Mr. Hawes brings to the position 32 years of Weymouth citizenship and undoubtedly knows much of its legislative wants and needs. He also holds a two year's legislative record which will bear the closest investigation.

TO BE CANDIDATE.

Former Water Commissioner Robert S. Hoffman Candidate for Representative.

ROBERT S. HOFFMAN

East Weymouth seems to be the center of the political activity thus far the past few weeks. Among those announcing their candidacy for office is Robert S. Hoffman, former Water Commissioner and one of East Weymouth's most popular citizens. Mr. Hoffman feels that his experience and knowledge in the town needs and its affairs, warrant him a careful consideration at the primaries this fall.

MOVE PARK AT NORTH WEYMOUTH.

After Much Agitation Plot For Park on Bridge and Saunders Street Moved to Planned Location.

Through the earnest efforts of J. P. Scott, "The Park" which has been wrongly situated, North Weymouthites claim, has at last been removed to its correct location, as indicated by the original plan of the street. North Weymouthites say that it has taken about two years to impress upon the town the need of this change. Bridge street is quite heavily travelled and autos wishing to enter Saunders street, which was made narrow by reason of "the Park" being placed in the middle, have had some very narrow escapes from accident. Two or three slight accidents have occurred this year which have awakened people to the fact that unless the Park was removed it might cost the town more for a "damage suit" than the removal would cost.

The hedge has been removed and the trees transplanted in the intended places and the grading is now being attended to.

Weatherman Puts Crimp In Many Attractive Programs. South Weymouth To Hold Festivities To-morrow. Other Holiday News.

Rain in great quantity and of all day duration marred most of the Fourth of July celebrations about town this year. Postponements galore have been reported, and the weatherman is a decidedly unpopular person at present with all lovers of good holiday weather.

In South Weymouth the committee in charge of the much advertised and well arranged celebration attempted to put through their program as much as possible, but the spirits of all who would have been the prime movers in the day's fun, were dampened by rain all the morning and at noon, a committee meeting was held, after which it was officially announced that the afternoon and evening programs were postponed until tomorrow (Saturday), the time and place being the same.

The morning program on Tuesday was well carried out in spite of the rain. At 8.30 o'clock the Horribles Parade was held starting in Columbian Square, marching to Independence Square by the way of pleasant street, thence along Main street to Columbian, there to the square again, where the prizes were awarded. Burton B. Wright for the most unique affair, Mr. Wright being dressed as Uncle Sam, pushing a baby labeled Mexico and dragging a goat on which was a sign "I've got Mexico's Goat." Miss Charlotte Davis was awarded the prize for the most horrible costume. She was dressed in rags of every hue.

Among the participants in this parade were Boy Scouts, Sam French as Uncle Sam, Francis Green on horseback, dressed as an oldtime schoolmaster; Mrs. Wallace Harris as the Goddess of Liberty; Louis Cook 3d as Villa, the Mexican bandit, Warren Campbell as Charlie Chaplin, and a goodly number of clowns, cowboys, Indians and Chinese Mandarins.

A float of ten young ladies all dressed in white, representing the Weymouth Visiting Nurse Association, was awarded a special prize, it being the only float in the parade.

Following this feature the Boy Scouts held a flag raising in Columbian Square. Miss Helen A. Live read the Declaration of Independence, a recitation was given by Frederick O'Connor on "The Stars and Stripes" and Freeman Putney, former superintendent of schools in Gloucester for 30 years, gave an address on "Our Flag."

The decorated bicycle, school children and Campfire girls parade came next with many entrants. The route was around Columbian Square and the prize winners were as follows: Bicycles, John Torrey 1st, and Lester Lindblom second; girls, Barbara Cole first and Dorothea Pratt second.

In the doll carriage parade, including decorated velocipedes, etc., first prize for the most original outfit went to a group of youngsters from Nash's corner, who made up a bridal party. Dwight Nash was the bridegroom and Miss Alma Roach the bride. The pastor was Harold Allen and a group of flower girls, bridesmaids etc., made up the party.

Second prize was awarded Alvah Raymond with a cart of vegetables. The best decorated doll carriage prizes went to Miss Majorie Belcher and Bessie Sargent.

In the line of carts, Louis Cools third and his sister Katherine Cools won first prize, the boy being dressed as Uncle Sam and the girl as the Goddess of Liberty.

Second prize was awarded little Caroline Dwyer, dressed as a Red Cross nurse and dragging an ambulance with a wounded doll on a stretcher.

In the division for small children Elizabeth Hollis, decked out in black face, red white and blue dress and imitating a typical old-time colored woman, pushing a baby, drew first prize while Mary Lou in a fancy dress won second prize.

Among others of note in the parade were Beulah Sherman as a Red Cross Nurse, Masters Norman and Winston Howe as ice-men, Everett Loud, bedecked in a suit of Irish green, Herbert Deree as Uncle Sam, while at the head of the children's parade strode Richard Smith as Uncle Sam, followed by Miss Evelyn Hanson as the "Goddess of Liberty."

In a game on the Agricultural Grounds at South Weymouth last Tuesday afternoon, marked by sharp fielding and featured by three double plays, that was carried to 12 innings, the White Sox of South Weymouth beat the Hanover A. A., 6 to 5.

Batteries, Stone and Hirt; Wilder and A. Damon.

The list of events scheduled for the postponed program tomorrow includes all the children's sports; 1 o'clock Old Colony Driving Club racing; 1.30 baseball game; midway attractions, auto-parade at 4 o'clock with prizes for best decorated cars, band concerts by Milo Burke's band; addresses, bicycle and running races and fireworks and illumination. The events will take place at the Fair grounds as originally scheduled.

AT LOVELL'S CORNER.

The committee appointed by the citizens of Lovell's Corner although handicapped somewhat with the threatening weather provided a celebration of the 4th far ahead of previous years. Walter W. Pratt chairman, Samuel French secretary, and Mrs. Charles White treasurer, with about ten different able committee chairmen composed the 4th Committee. They were very fortunate in that the rain held off and in only one exception interfered in the least with the carrying out of the program as arranged and that was the annual ball game between the married and single gentlemen. As nothing else was in order for other parts of the town, quite a large number were present from neighboring villages, most especially in the evening at the big moving picture show at which the popular "Abe" Rousseau who conducted the East Weymouth Carnival show was far ahead in the quality and selection of all his previous records even with the prevailing condition attendant, they could not be improved upon.

A feature was the entertaining of the children by free ice cream by the local troop of Boy Scouts who held an ice cream sale the evening before to obtain funds which gave them 8 gallons of cream for the kiddies.

The celebration started Sunday evening with a patriotic service at the Porter M. E. church which was largely attended. After the opening by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Lotz, Frank Rea was given charge as the representative of the celebration committee who after a short address of welcome introduced the speakers of the evening. Mr. Bradford Hawes who spoke on "Changing our Patriotism" a plea for the safe and sane celebration. Mr. Martin E. Hawes followed with "America, for Americans without a hyphen," which called for a true Americanism which like a melting pot removed all hyphens. The choir and a quartette under the direction of Mrs. Lotz assisted by an orchestra rendered appropriate music. A unique feature was the pinning of a tri-colored bouquet in the button hole of each man by a young lady upon entering.

Monday evening "The night before" a patriotic concert by about 50 children under the direction of Frank Blanchard was given "on the corner" of Washington and Pleasant streets with a large crowd witnessing. A short parade of the characters preceded the pageant led by bugler Ralph Beals and Boy Scouts. An orchestra furnished music for the evening which called forth applause. The pageant which featured Betsy Ross making the Flag for George Washington and inspired by Liberty, was handicapped somewhat for sufficient stage room but was a success and the different characters deserve much praise for their costuming and efforts to provide a different celebration in a safe and sane way. The characters were:

Liberty—Miss Edith Smith.
Betsy Ross—Miss Marjorie Rea
George Washington—Mr. Robert Martin

Columbia—Miss Eleanor Blanchard
Uncle Sam—Mr. Samuel French and thirteen young ladies representing the original States each attended by a small child bearing the state's star to place in the flag. A drill of states with the thirteen stripes was featured

AMERICAN CHICLE COMPANY

ON THE FARM

Some people think that the dry cow needs no care, but those that make the best records have the best care during their period of rest.

Remove the harness and heavy collars from the horses during the noon hour. You will note the difference in their work in the afternoon.

Extensive tomato growers train their earliest plants to single stems, leaving the rows not less than 3 feet apart, and the plants 1 foot apart in the row. All side branches are pinched off as fast as they appear, and the single stem is supported by stakes or wire trellis, the stock being tied at intervals with coarse twine. When the plant is about 4 feet high the top is nipped and all the growth directed to the clusters of fruit. This method produces not only early fruit, but that which is large, smooth and fine.

When cutworms are abundant on corn land, the use of a poisoned bait is recommended, which is made by mixing 50 pounds of wheat bran, 2 pounds of Paris green and 6 finely chopped oranges or lemons. Low-grade molasses is added until the mixture attains the consistency of a stiff dough. This mixture should be distributed over the field in small lumps and sparingly around each hill, during the late afternoon or early evening. A narrow band of the bait around the edge of the field will be of great assistance.

Many breeders think they should begin feeding right away after the litter of pigs come. This is a serious mistake. A litter should not be fed until thirty-six hours after farrowing. Then the sow should have a warm drink. If an animal is fed before the litter is able to take all the milk supply, then you get milk fever. After thirty-six hours gradually feed the sow and litter until the pigs are big enough to take the entire milk supply. As they grow increase the feed until the sow and litter have all they will eat.

When "leg weakness" occurs in adult birds, they hobble about, sit down frequently and, in severe cases, become unable to walk at all. It has been ascribed to rheumatism, though probably with little reason, and to overfeeding on corn and other fat-forming foods. Old birds, particularly of the larger varieties, sometimes become so fat that the rear end drags upon the ground. As the condition is little understood there are no remedies save those directed to the general health and vigor of the fowls. Quarters should be dry and comfortable, food should be sufficient variety, avoiding too exclusive feeding upon corn; an ample supply of green food should be given and overfeeding upon meat or other stimulating food should be avoided.

Wheat and corn, alone make a satisfactory chick food, though the addition of hulled oats may be used equally well. Day-old chicks need only cracked corn, but they will soon eat whole wheat and coarser corn. Rolled oats may be fed alone and their conspicuous shape and color make them easily seen and apparently attractive to chicks just out of the incubator. The number of ingredients in commercial chick foods gives them the virtue, such as it is, of variety and makes them more attractive to the amateur purchaser; very likely, also some of these ingredients are cheaper than wheat and corn. You need not hesitate to use wheat and corn in equal parts, though the best chick grain that I know of is the "one-two-three" mixture, viz., one part pin-head, or steel cut, oats; two parts cracked corn and three parts cracked wheat. After a few weeks, equal parts of whole wheat and cracked corn suffice for whole grains; other foods being given in the mash.

Subway Development.

The first "subways" were cuts for pipes and wires, large enough for a man to walk in, and supplied with inspection openings. These were installed in Paris by Napoleon III. The Chicago street traffic subways were first built in 1866-71. But in our general modern acceptance of the word, the first "subways" were those of the deep underground steam railway of London, built in 1826. The first "real subway" in the United States was that in Boston, 1897.

Beware the Gossypol!

Before cottonseed can become a suitable food for human beings, the gossypol it contains must be extracted or neutralized. For gossypol is a poison. Stock raisers in the cotton districts know how cottonseed meal often poisons their animals. Gossypol is a substance allied to carboic acid, but its chemistry is unknown. W. A. Withers and F. E. Carruth, in a report in the Journal of Agricultural Research, prove it is gossypol that causes the poisoning.

A Pessimist's Optimistic View.

"Are you looking forward to the summer with pleasant anticipations?" asked the optimistic citizen. "Yes, indeed," replied the pessimistic person. "A great many people I'm tired of looking at will go out of town for the summer."

Essential to Joyous Wedlock.

In the Woman's Home Companion a writer thoroughly trained in a domestic way says: "We hear all the time about homes being wrecked by the inability of women to keep house; just as many have been wrecked by the inability of the man. A young man at the mercy of his plumber, and who wields a carving knife as if it were a clam hoe isn't fit for marriage."

Altering the Map Without War.

In a world where nations grow and decay, where forces change and populations become cramped, it is not possible or desirable to maintain the status quo forever. If peace is to be preserved, nations must learn to accept unfavorable alterations of the map without feeling that they must first be defeated in war, or that in yielding they incur a humiliation. Bertrand Russell in Atlantic Monthly.

Man's Preference.

If women only listened to men in their choice of clothes, they would always be "tailored" on the street and in public places in the afternoon. There is no uniform in which they appear that so pleases the masculine eye; but the trouble is that the American woman yields to the vagaries of fashions that are set for the French woman, and very often, and in great mass, loses her identity.

Bird Commuters.

Thrushes, finches and buntings are the most stylish birds of Washington and Oregon, where they aim to spend the winter, but are forced frequently to take week-end trips to California if the weather grows too severe, says the Indianapolis News. Bright moonlit nights are always chosen for these temporary migrations, and as soon as the weather modifies the birds return to their chosen North, even though another trip may soon be necessary.

On the Survey

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

I was second mate of the British steamer Forward during her two years of exploration in the mouth of the Amazon, and no other field could have been selected to furnish more daily adventure.

The Forward carried two six-pound cannon as her armament, and when loaded drew only five feet of water. We were conveyed from Georgetown, in British Guiana, by a man-of-war and a brig, the latter to anchor where our captain directed and remain as a store ship and a haven for us in case of disaster.

We had a steam launch and two yawls for exploration where the steamer could not go, and there were six of us out in the launch one day making soundings in a great bend, when a monster crocodile rose to the surface close beside us, lunged forward and had his head and one leg over the gunwale before any one saw him. The engineer had a hatchet within reach, and with this he gave the reptile such a blow as made him draw off and slink out of sight. The launch had scarcely righted herself, however, when a full dozen more of the saurians rose to the attack. We should have been capsize and every man devoured alive had we been in one of the yawls. As it was, we drove ahead full speed and outran them, though some of them pursued us for half a mile, and we were nearly swamped with the water splashed into the boat. A few days later, one afternoon as the steamer came to anchor in a channel, the anchor must have dropped among a bed of sleeping crocodiles. They rose all about us, hissing and splashing, and this excitement brought up others until sixty-six enormous big fellows were to be counted at one time. They attacked the steamer with the utmost fury, and while their efforts were harmless their struggles rocked her as if she was at sea in a gale.

On another occasion one of these monsters did us a good turn. I had charge of one of the yawls which was sounding a channel. The men at the oars were pulling slowly against the current, while the one handling the lead was casting and calling out when zip! came a dart, from the sound it made. Either shore was too far off for a dart to reach us. Over our starboard bow as we pulled ahead was a long tongue of land reaching out from the right hand shore and ending in a pile of driftwood. The tongue had been created by drifting trees grounding on the bottom and the silt collecting to make a bar. I stood up in the boat and took a long look, but could see nothing. I ought to have been able to detect even a rabbit anywhere on that tongue or drift, as there were no bushes, but nothing whatever was in sight. I was in the act of sitting down, almost satisfied that we had all been deceived when a second arrow whisked so close to my cheek that I thought a bird had darted for my eye.

"A close call, sir, and it was a poisoned dart at that," said one of the men as I dropped back to my seat. "The infernal wretch must be in that driftwood, though I can't see him," added the man with the lead line.

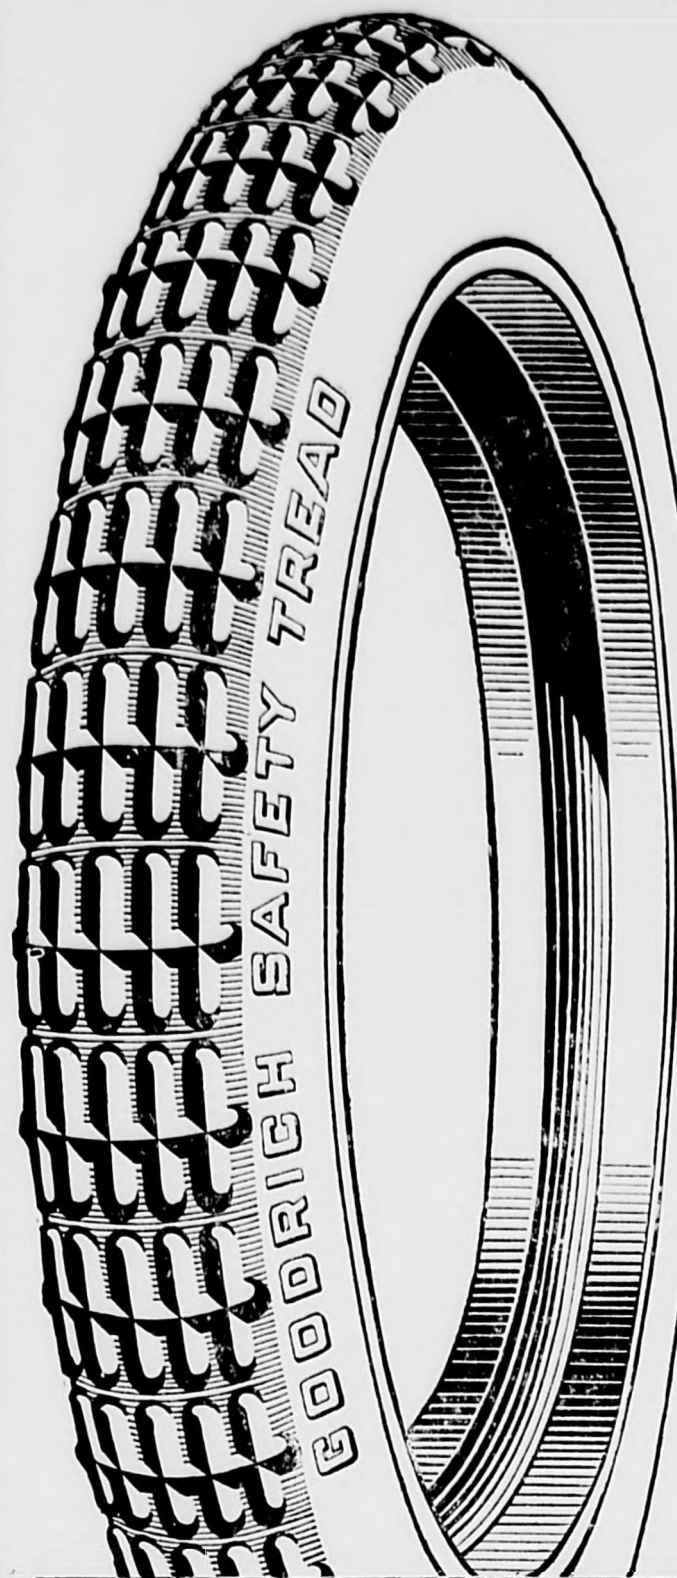

We held the boat stationary and prepared to signal to the steamer, which was a mile below, when all of a sudden a fifteen foot crocodile landed on the tongue of land and began crawling toward the driftwood. He had just reached the pile when a native who had been skillfully concealed rose up with a cry of despair. He had a reed or blowgun in his hands, and he made frantic motions to us to save him. We were consulting what to do when the crocodile made a rush, drove him off the pile and followed after to catch him in the water. As we saw nothing of the man after that, we felt positive of his horrible fate, though we had no sympathy to waste.

The jaguar of the Amazon is also called a cougar, a puma and a panther, and he seems to be one and the same beast, no matter what the name. He is lithe, fierce and vigilant and an enemy to be dreaded by even the best armed man. We often saw pumas on the shore or crouched in trees and now and then floating past us on drifting logs, and their far reaching cries were always to be heard at night if we lay within a mile of the jungle. The only man of us killed in the two years met his fate at the hands of a jaguar and under singular circumstances. We had landed on the right hand shore and then paid out our rope cable by which we were fast to a tree to be safe from a cave-in during the night. The anchor watch for the night consisted of only one man, relieved at intervals of four hours.

The man who went on at midnight had been on duty only half an hour when a cave-in took place. A strip of the bank, which was four feet above water when we turned in dropped to the river, and with it the tree to which we were fast. The tree fell directly over the bows of the boat, but only its top coming aboard, and that without doing any great damage. We heard the man's shouts of alarm, but before any one had turned out it was all over with him. A jaguar had been hidden in the treetop, and as the tree fell it came aboard with it and at once sprang upon the watchman. He had the man by the throat and was sucking his blood as we turned out and finished him.

Many similar adventures filled our days before we finished our explorations on the Amazon.

The Wholesome Onion.

Onions are a specific for the complexion. They should be boiled whole in milk—drink the latter—or steamed and eaten with bread and butter and cheese. Then they make a satisfying and nutritious meal, on which you can do brain work or manual labor. Try onions! The taste and after-smell? A mouthful of hot coffee takes away both.

Improved Electric Fan.

A novel type of electric fan may be suspended by its own feed cord from any suitably placed lamp socket, the space usually taken up being thus saved. The fan is five inches in diameter, and with its socket weighs but little more than two pounds, but on any alternating or direct current circuit of 110 volts is driven at a speed that gives a good circulation of air throughout a room of ordinary size.

Why He Needed it

Having listened to the voice of the siren, a San Francisco man contracted to purchase a piece of property in a suburban tract without going to look at it. When he did, he was surprised. Not long afterward he visited his bank to negotiate a loan. "It's in connection with some lots I have bought," said the borrower. "Do you want the money to finish paying for them?" asked the banker. "Heavens, no," was the reply. "I want the money to buy gasoline enough so that I can drive out to see them."

Weymouth Gazette

FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1916

Our soldier boys on the way to Mexico got sandwiches and cheers in the south, while the boys of 1861, who went through Baltimore got most bricks and many jeers.

Our citizens who have not joined in giving money to the Belgians, Poles and Serbians because they said they wished to see their money spent nearer home, should now cheerfully give to help the fund for families of volunteers who have gone to Mexico.

We notice that the Weymouth physicians have advanced their prices, the new scale calling for practically a dollar raise for all calls and most treatments. It may be necessary for our doctors to adopt this course, but we hope they will make up this increase in their best efforts towards a proper and careful treatment of the public who pay the increase.

In another column today we publish a story containing many pertinent facts regarding Weymouth and a sewerage system. We believe it is time Weymouth did something about a sewerage system. It is the largest town in this state without such a system. As far back as 30 years ago a committee was appointed to "investigate" the cost, maintenance, etc., of a sewerage system for this town. Today we are still appointing committees to "investigate" such systems. The State Board of Health says Weymouth is an unsanitary town. We need a sewer—we have excellent other kinds of improvements—let's get started toward a definite goal in installing a sewerage system—it will help the town in more ways than one—Let's not put it off any longer.

TOWN BUSINESS.

Selectmen's Business and Other Departments of Work and Expenditures.

At the regular meeting of the Selectmen held at the town office on Monday the following business was transacted:

Rev. J. H. Harrigan of St. Ambrose Church, Dorchester asked for a license to hold a field day at New Downers Landing on August 5. The board took the matter up and voted to grant the request.

Invitation was received from the South Weymouth Improvement Association to attend the Fourth of July celebration at that place. It was voted to accept. The parade is to take place Saturday, July 8.

Hearing on the petition of the New England Telephone & Telegram Co. for relocation of 19 poles on Park street. No remonstrances, so the petition was granted.

Also from the same company, a petition to relocate 7 poles on Washington street which was also granted.

License to dig clams was granted to John W. Pierce, Jr.

Weymouth Sewerage Question.

Much Agitation About Town In Regard To System. Prominent Officials Say Need Is Urgent.

About thirty years ago in the annual March meeting of the town of Weymouth the citizens appropriated $500 and appointed a committee to take up the matter of a sewerage system for the town. What that committee reported, after hiring an expert to go over the situation, we are unable to find out, but at intervals since that year, 1886, the townspeople have kept right on appointing committees to "investigate and report" at some future meeting.

Thirty years is, as many of our citizens say, long enough to consider a project, even as large as this one is, and from all over town we are hearing much agitation in favor of doing something about a sewerage system.

Believing the subject one of timely interest to all Weymouthites, the Gazette has gone into the subject during the past few days in a very careful manner, with State Board of Health officials and also officials and experts in this town.

From reports and recommendations, secured from the State Board of Health, the following conclusions have been carefully deducted.

About one half of the cities and towns in the state of Massachusetts, which have public water supplies are provided with systems of sewerage. Of the other half which does not have the system, Weymouth has the largest population and it is nearly impossible to maintain proper sanitary conditions at the present time, in all the thickly settled portions. At best it is usually necessary to clean out vaults and empty cesspools at more or less frequent intervals, a process which involves a very considerable nuisance.

North Weymouth Yacht Club.

Pretty lively times have been in progress at the North Weymouth Yacht Club the past week. On Saturday evening last, on Monday evening and on Tuesday evening there were dancing parties with a large party of young people from all over town attending each night—also many of the older ones looking on and enjoying the dance. On Sunday evening the O. C. orchestra of South Weymouth gave a concert. The afternoon of the Fourth was given over to the children of the members and they enjoyed all kinds of games and dancing. Boat races were held on the river in which everyone was interested. In the evening there was an intermission of an hour when "movies" were introduced. The weather was rather bad for full enjoyment but in spite of this everything was carried out as planned.

W. R. C. Notes.

The regular meeting of Corps 102 will be held on Tuesday, July 11, at 2:30 p. m. Quarterly reports of the officers and committees will be an interesting feature. Members are reminded of the Women's Exchange connected with Corps 102. The chairman, Mrs. S. Addie Pease, will attend to all orders and requests promptly.

The Exact Status.

"I understand your neighbor keeps chickens?" "Not exactly. He owns chickens, but my garden furnishes their keep."

and great care has to be taken not to pollute the sources of water supply.

In the spring and times of heavy rainfall sewerage overflows to the nearest drain or water course, with the result that conditions injurious to the health are created. Therefore State experts all agree most decidedly that Weymouth is greatly in need of a sewerage system. However Weymouth is not alone in its need for several of the neighboring towns should consider the subject.

The sewerage of East Weymouth and South Weymouth would, we are told naturally be collected near the level of tide water at the head of Weymouth Back River. It seems desirable that the sewerage of Weymouth and Braintree, on account of their proximity should be disposed of together, since the expense to each town would be greatly reduced. The high level gravity sewer appears to afford a means by which the sewerage of these towns can be conveyed to a suitable outlet at a reasonable expense.

The method of the disposal of the sewerage presents a serious problem and requires the co-operation of our citizens with those of other municipalities or districts, in order to have the best solution and result.

Experts say that one of the best and cheapest disposals of the waste is through the South Metropolitan sewerage system. Entrance for disposal through this system, would cost the town an amount equal to a certain percent of the town's valuation, the sum said to be in the neighborhood of $20,000. As this is the cheapest and probably best way of disposing of the sewerage, it seems worthy of careful thought on our townspeople's part.

King Cove Boat Club Notes.

At the King Cove Club house on the afternoon of the 4th, Mrs. Lester Culley, with other members of the auxiliary, served a buffet lunch from 4:30 to 6:30. The menu of clam chowder, sandwiches, coffee, ice cream and fruit punch was appreciated to the extent of selling everything they had with calls for more. A pleasant social evening followed.

The Ladies' Circle holds an all-day meeting on the 12th in preparation of their annual sale and supper latter this month.

Almost Insulted.

"What is your favorite soft drink?" asked the breezy young man. "Sir," answered Colonel Soaksby, with some degree of asperity, "those concoctions interest me not at all. Fortunately, I have never been in such a predicament that I could not get water for bathing purposes."

Federal inquiry or Railroad Strike?

Faced by demands from the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen that would impose on the country an additional burden in transportation costs of $100,000,000 a year, the railroads propose that this wage problem be settled by reference to an impartial Federal tribunal.

With these employees, whose efficient service is acknowledged, the railroads have no differences that could not be considered fairly and decided justly by such a public body.

Railroads Urge Public Inquiry and Arbitration

The formal proposal of the railroads to the employees for the settlement of the controversy is as follows:

"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and disinterested agencies. Therefore, we propose that your proposals and the proposition of the railroads be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods:

1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railroads, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved; or
2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law" (The Newlands Act).

Leaders Refuse Offer and Take Strike Vote

Leaders of the train service brotherhoods, at the joint conference held in New York, June 1-15, refused the offer of the railroads to submit the issue to arbitration or Federal review, and the employees are now voting on the question whether authority shall be given these leaders to declare a nation-wide strike.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is proposed by the railroads as the public body to which this issue ought to be referred for these reasons:

No other body with such an intimate knowledge of railroad conditions has such an unquestioned position in the public confidence.

The rates the railroads may charge the public for transportation are now largely fixed by this Government board.

Out of every dollar received by the railroads from the public nearly one-half is paid directly to the employees as wages; and the money to pay increased wages can come from no other source than the rates paid by the public.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, with its control over rates, is in a position to make a complete investigation and render such decision as would protect the interests of the railroad employees, the owners of the railroads, and the public.

A Question For the Public to Decide

The railroads feel that they have no right to grant a wage preferment of $100,000,000 a year to these employees, now highly paid and constituting only one-fifth of all the employees, without a clear mandate from a public tribunal that shall determine the merits of the case after a review of all the facts.

The single issue before the country is whether this controversy is to be settled by an impartial Government inquiry or by industrial warfare.

AUTO TURNS SOMERSAULT.

Serious Accident at Lakeview Park Last Wednesday Morning.

Fred H. Howe of Jamaica Plain, while driving his auto on Washington street, Wednesday, near the Lake View Park, received fractures to two ribs. His wife and two children were painfully cut and bruised. The accident happened while the driver was trying to avoid a collision with a wagon. The auto turned a complete somersault and righted itself without dislodging its occupants. When the auto turned somersault, the top being up, it struck the road upside down in such a manner that it continued the somersault and landed upright on its wheels.

The occupants were all taken to the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital. It is feared that Mrs. Howe and her 17 year old daughter may have received internal injuries. Fred Howe Jr., was the least injured of all. The machine was badly damaged.

Safe and Sane Fourth.

On the morning of the fourth, a parade was formed and led over the different streets which was one of the best events. Bradford Hawes as marshal was as good as Weymouth can furnish. The East Weymouth band furnished music which showed that Weymouth musicians are still in the lead with their instruments. A line of local police followed assisted by a number of circus clowns at times.

A decorated float containing 10 women costumed in white, and representing the District Nurse Association took the first prize; the second prize went to the Ladies' improvement Association float and John Maynard in a fancy decorated float took the third prize.

In the parade of school children a delegation of 30 pupils from the James Humphrey school, costumed as Puritan maids and Pilgrim men, got the prize.

Julian Rea as the woman, John Drinkwater as the man and Boyder Smith as the babe got the first prize in the horrible parade; Frank Huff and Charles Huff as pedlers got the second, and Frank Blanchard with his circus took third prize.

An afternoon orchestral concert in the Porter Church auditorium and an outdoor moving picture show in the evening completed the program.

RECORD OF THE PAST.

No Stronger Evidence Can Be Had in Weymouth.

Look well to their record. What they have done many times in years gone by is the best guarantee of future results. Anyone with a bad back; any reader suffering from urinary troubles, from kidney ills, should find comforting words in the following statement.

John J. Higgins, 18 Canterbury Street, East Weymouth, says: "Exposure and all kinds of weather tended to bring on trouble with my kidneys. My back got so bad that some days I couldn't sit or stralhter. Severe headaches and dizzy spells caused me much suffering and often I felt weak and tired all over. Sometimes I was confined to my bed for weeks at a time. The kidney secretions caused me great annoyance, passing too frequently at night. They were highly colored, painful and contained sediment. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me so much benefit from the start that I kept on taking them and soon improved greatly." (Statement given May 25, 1915.)

PRaises DOAN'S AGAIN

On April 3, 1916 Mr. Higgins said: "I am glad to again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. I keep them in my home at all times to use in case of necessity."

Ever Notice It?

If you stop to think, you can doubtless name a number of people who talk too much—including yourself.

Yea, Verily!

"Champagne," remarked Colonel Mixem, "is less intoxicating than beer." "How do you figure that out?" queried his friend Jaggsmitth. "Because fewer people can afford to drink it," replied the colonel, as he proceeded to erase the foam from his mustache.

No Servant Problem Here.

The servant problem has not bothered Mrs. H. L. Garland of Opelousas, La., according to the American Magazine. She has had one servant in her family for 63 years, a negro woman who commenced her duties as servant eight years before the Civil war began. The name of this paragon, who shows that the old-time darky devotion still exists, is Mrs. Sophie Simms.

Helping Each Other.

Sometimes we can help each other best by letting each other alone. At other times we need the friendly hand-clasp and the word of cheer. Men are under the domain of natural law as much as bees. Bees live only through co-operation—a frictionless, efficient working together. Men also succeed only by working harmoniously with other men, and for other men as well as for themselves.

Queen's Carriage.

By the beginning of the seventeenth century the use of carriages and coaches had become so prevalent in England that in 1601 the attention of parliament was drawn to the subject, and a bill "to restrain the excessive use of coaches" was introduced, which, however, was rejected on its second reading. In the early part of the century it was estimated that there were 6,000 in London and its vicinity.

Overheard in 2000 A. D.

"Now, this is the skeleton of a man who lived in the twentieth century." "Why is one arm so much longer than the other, professor?" "This is not an unusual case. You will notice that the right arm is several inches longer than the left and is due to the custom, quite common in those days of clinging to a strap with the right hand while holding a newspaper in the left hand."

Miss Potifer's Pomeranian

It Converted a Dog Hater

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Dr. Thornby was thirty years old and a bachelor. His practice took up all his time during the day, and when he reached his rooms in the evening, sometimes late, he was too tired to go out to seek amusement. Perhaps his case was no different from other men who are regularly occupied with making a living, perhaps he had reached an age when a home with no one in it to cherish first begins to seem lonely, perhaps nature, having been cheated out of her rights, had begun to rebel. Be this as it may, when Dr. Thornby went into his rooms one evening after an anxious day over a very sick patient he longed for some one to comfort him.

The next day after the doctor had finished with his morning office consultation, exerting himself to put the best face on conditions that looked dark indeed and having swallowed a hasty lunch, he went to where his car was standing and, tossing in his bag of medicines and medical implements, got into the car himself. A little dog bounded in behind him and sought a warm place in his lap.

The doctor's mind was upon a very sick patient, and the little stranger was by no means welcome.

"Where did it come from?" asked Dr. Thornby as he pointed to the fluffy bundle of animation.

James, the chauffeur, turned a casual eye on the black Pomeranian who was licking the doctor's glove with a tiny red velvet tongue.

"I couldn't say, sir. I never noticed it until you spoke."

The doctor looked up and down the street in search of some foolish woman who might be the owner of the lapdog, but the street was deserted.

"I'll take him to the pound," said the doctor absently and immediately forgot all about the Pomeranian, which nestled down in the bearskin robe until all one could distinguish was a pair of sparkling eyes.

Dr. Thornby detested small dogs, especially when they were carried by women, and he was supposed to be a woman hater, which in a way was not at all detrimental to his practice, for the fair sex rather liked his brusque manner, even when he told them that they must battle with their disordered nerves all alone with the weapons of plenty of fresh air and exercise and exertion of undiscovered forces of will power.

In spite of this very excellent advice they flocked to Dr. Thornby, and some of them professed to enjoy his look of disapproval when they brought their toy dogs along.

Two days later Dr. Thornby was still in possession of the little Pomeranian of which he had grown very fond. "I shall keep him, James, unless I find the owner," explained the doctor, and he hesitated to add that he had not yet advertised that he had found the dog.

That very afternoon, when he consulted his tablets, he found that an urgent call had come from 83 Cinnamon terrace. He had several patients in aristocratic Cinnamon terrace, but he did not recall the name of Potifer.

No. 83 was a long, low, homelike residence, and when he rang the bell it was immediately answered by a smart Japanese butler.

"I am Dr. Thornby," said the physician.

"Ah, excuse, sir; come this way, please. It is Miss Potifer who is so ill."

The man led the way to an upper sitting room, where the doctor was greeted by Mrs. Potifer, a very stout, amiable looking woman, who confessed to being much worried over her daughter's condition.

"Florence has never had a day's illness in her life," said Mrs. Potifer, "and it doesn't seem possible that her nerves should give way all at once."

"Nerves!" groaned the doctor. "More nerves!"

Mrs. Potifer opened a white door and introduced Dr. Thornby to a lovely young woman, who was reclining on a couch in a charming pink and white boudoir.

There was a strong odor of cologne water in the room, and Miss Potifer's beautiful brown eyes gave evidence of recent tears.

"I never felt better in my life, doctor," wailed Florence Potifer, as the handsome young physician sat down beside her. "I never felt better in my life at the moment when he disappeared."

"My daughter has suffered a great sorrow," put in Mrs. Potifer feelingly. "I am very sorry indeed," said the doctor, experiencing a vague jealousy of the man whose disappearance had caused such sorrow in one so young and lovely.

Florence Potifer sobbed softly into a lace trimmed handkerchief and permitted the doctor to feel her pulse.

"He was worth five hundred dollars," remarked Mrs. Potifer.

"He couldn't have been much of a catch," thought Thornby as he puzzled his brows over Miss Potifer's lack of symptoms. "I've got a pretty fat bank account myself."

"It wasn't the money," murmured Florence, "but he was so dear, so sweet."

Dr. Thornby blushed.

"How did he disappear?" he asked gently.

"I am afraid somebody has stolen him. I took him for a walk day before yesterday, and all at once he left me. I've never seen him since."

Dr. Thornby left a soothing draft, recommended that the patient sleep with plenty of fresh air in her room and to endeavor to forget her grief for the night. He said that by morning she would feel much better and would be able to pursue the search for her missing friend.

"A friend indeed!" gushed Mrs. Potifer. "Florence loved People Winks almost to death."

"Good heavens!" ejaculated the doctor as he drove away. "Imagine a lovely girl like that falling in love with a man named People Winks!"

During the remainder of the day Dr. Thornby, the woman hater, could not forget the lovely, grief stricken countenance of Florence Potifer.

In the evening while he snatched a few hours of leisure in his study he was still thinking of her. The little black Pomeranian was curled in his lap, for he had won himself a way right into the doctor's heart. And the doctor was shamelessly planning not to advertise the dog at all.

The little dog was licking his new master's hand, and the doctor was thinking of Miss Potifer and the mysterious disappearance of her friend.

Suddenly he laughed aloud as he remembered the ridiculous name.

"People Winks!" he cried scoffingly.

To his amazement, the little dog jumped up and barked frantically. He ran to the door and whined and scratched.

"By jove, I believe he recognized that name," thought the physician. "I'll try him again."

"People Winks!" he called sharply and the dog came bounding back again, exhibiting every evidence of delight at the sound of the name.

"I'll be hanged if I don't believe this dog belongs to that Winks chap," muttered the doctor. "No harm in taking him around to the Potifers in the morning. Miss Potifer might tell me where to find his owner—but of course she couldn't do that—the fellow's lost himself. Imagine losing oneself from a perfect creature like Miss Potifer!"

All of which goes to show that all the doctor's pet aversions were tottering.

The next morning he drove up to Cinnamon terrace with a queer fluttering in the region of his heart.

Under his arm was tucked the silky form of the Pomeranian doggie. As he passed up the walk the dog wriggled to get free, but the doctor had grown too fond of the little fellow to part with him so easily, and so when he was finally shown into Miss Potifer's presence the dog was clutched to his bosom.

Miss Potifer was looking brighter, and she smiled charmingly to the physician, but when she heard a short, joyous bark from the little black dog, she arose from her sofa and flew with outstretched arms to meet him.

"Oh, my darling, darling People Winks!" she cried as she took the dog in her arms. "Did oo run away from oo missy? And did de bestest doctor find ums little People Winks for he missy?"

Dr. Thornby felt no disgust when he heard these words of endearment fall from the red lips of Florence Potifer. Indeed, he looked very much as if he envied that fortunate canine.

"Now, tell me where you found my darling," cried Miss Potifer, who had recovered with astonishing speed. Her cheeks were pink and her eyes were shining like twin stars.

In a few words Dr. Thornby related how he had discovered People Winks nestled among the bearskins in his limousine and how he had fallen in love with the silky mite.

"And when you heard us tell about losing People Winks I suppose you thought of my darling at once," said Florence.

The doctor blushed.

"To tell the truth, Miss Potifer, when your mother spoke about losing some friend called 'People Winks' I really believed it to be the name of a man."

"A man?" Then the doctor discovered that Florence Potifer had the most joyous laugh he had ever listened to. Presently he joined her, and then Mrs. Potifer came in to hear the wonderful story of how People Winks had been recovered by the doctor.

"I shall miss the little rascal," said the doctor as he took leave of his fully recovered patient.

"You must come and see him once in awhile," said Mrs. Potifer cordially.

A few days afterward Dr. Thornby confessed to himself with some confusion that he sorely missed the pleasant companionship of little People Winks.

"I believe I'll go and see the little beggar," he said after he had completed his calls.

So once again he called at No. 83 Cinnamon terrace, and this time he was shown into the drawing room, where Miss Potifer was making tea for herself and feeding little cakes to greedy People Winks.

That was only the beginning of many calls at Cinnamon terrace for the acquaintance brought about by the disappearance of People Winks ripened into a friendship, and the friendship warmed into love.

"I hear you are a woman hater and that you detest toy dogs," protested Florence demurely when the doctor confessed his love, "and afraid to marry you. You might be unkind to my darling People Winks—unless you've changed your mind."

Dr. Thornby took her hands in his and looked into her glad eyes.

"Perhaps I haven't changed my mind, dear, but you see, there's only one girl in the whole world just like you, and that's you, and there's only one dog in the world like People Winks. So I'll keep to my opinions—and keep you both in the bargain."

A Story of Medieval Art

By ETHEL HOLMES

Satan, while always sowing, reaps by periods. Every now and again the world is astonished at some new outbreak of evil—not the ordinary criminality that is always with us, confined largely to those who are born to crime, but a harvest of villainy among those who are supposed to stand for morality.

An epidemic of crime settled upon Italy during the middle ages which pertained more especially to the very highest classes. It became the custom to eliminate one's enemy or such as stood in one's way by poison. Scientists instead of devoting themselves to interpreting the secrets of nature with a view to preserving life used their talents to discover means of producing death. Persons in authority instead of trying to benefit those under their sway sought the means of secretly putting out of the way those who opposed them.

The city of Florence, then in the province of Tuscany, has always been the home of art. A young man in Pisa, Giovanni Tolci, having shown marvelous artistic talents, removed to Florence to get the benefit of the masters and the works of art to be found in that city. So rapid was his progress and so great became his fame that he received a commission from the pope to paint an altar piece.

During Giovanni Tolci's stay in Florence, while loitering one evening on the banks of the Arno, he saw a girl on one of the bridges looking down into the river. Going on to the bridge, Giovanni stood near her and saw that she was looking at the mild Italian heavens reflected in the water. From her rapt appearance he surmised that she possessed that artistic temperament which was in himself. He was seized with a desire to know her and, inquiring who she was, secured an introduction.

Bianca Cellini was not an artist herself, but art was so natural to her that she was of inestimable benefit to Giovanni. She was able to warn him when he was entering upon false ground and to encourage him when he struck that which promised well. So keen was her artistic sense that he came to rely upon her entirely and would not trust his work until she had criticized it.

Bianca came to love the man in whose career she was interested. As for Giovanni, he was absorbed in his work. If he loved Bianca he was not aware of it, though there was a vague feeling within him that she was necessary to him as a companion as well as a critic.

When his altar piece was finished he left Florence with it to take it to Rome. On parting with Bianca he said to her: "Whatever success I have made in this picture I owe to you. If it brings me fame you are entitled to share it with me. There is no way by which you can do that so well as becoming my wife. That you shall be whenever you choose."

"You owe me nothing, Giovanni," was the reply. "If I have guided you on right artistic paths it has been with the greatest ease. I have had simply to see with my eyes and speak with my voice."

Giovanni, not considering that his cold offer was unlikely to draw any different reply, was much disappointed in it. It is possible that it revealed to him that his heart was in Bianca's possession. At any rate, he went to Rome wishing that she had accepted his offer.

His altar piece was accepted by the pope and when set up in the church for which it had been created was much admired. The new artistic star that had arisen was much courted. At times when he was surrounded by flatterers Bianca was forgotten, but as soon as he was alone she resumed her accustomed place in his mind, and he remembered that it was largely due to her he was enjoying this triumph.

At this time the Borgias were prominent in Rome. Signora Beatrice Borgia, who had married in the celebrated Borgia family, hearing of the fame of the Florentine artist, expressed a desire to see him. She was a very ambitious woman, one who possessed great power over men and who achieved her ends by bringing them under her sway. It occurred to her to make a conquest of this shining light. Why she desired to do so is not clear; but, judging from her character, it is probable that it was simply the elation of the domination of a famous man would give her.

Signora Borgia sent for Giovanni Tolci and commissioned him to paint her portrait. During the sittings she was dressed in the most becoming costumes that could be devised. She was as beautiful as she was unscrupulous and strove to dominate the artist through his senses. While he was at work he kept her talking in order to bring out an animated expression. She contrived to turn the conversation upon what interested him, for she was desirous to learn if his heart was preoccupied.

It was not long before she got the story of Bianca. Giovanni, who was not yet conscious of the fact that Bianca possessed his whole heart, spoke only of what he owed her as a counselor, but the wily signora knew more about what he really felt than he did himself. Since he dwelt continually on the little Florentine girl and would talk of no one else Signora Borgia was not long in inferring that he loved her. All the art the temptress possessed, all the flattery, the appeals to the senses, seemed to elicit but little response from the artist. The last named appeal was the strongest, but its effect was only temporary. She prolonged the sittings by requiring him to do over certain features, but even with this advantage she knew before the picture was finished that the Florentine girl was keeping from her the man she wished to conquer.

When nothing more seemed to be done to the portrait Signora Borgia said to the artist:

"This girl to whom you owe so much should share the triumph you are sure to make in this portrait. I am going to send for her to come to Rome to visit me, that she may enjoy your success."

Giovanni, who had arranged with the pope for a mural decoration that would take him at least a year to finish, eager to see again the girl who by this time he realized was necessary to him, gladly fell in with the plan. He sent a letter to Bianca with the one dispatched by the signora, assuring her of the change there was in him since he had left her and begging her to accept the invitation. Indeed, he wrote a genuine love letter.

Bianca, who was desirous to learn more of the woman whose portrait her lover was painting, wrote that she would come to Rome, but would feel bound to visit an aunt living there who had long ago given her a standing invitation. Signora Borgia insisted that when Bianca came she must sup at her palazzo with her and Giovanni.

Bianca went to Rome and a few days after her arrival went with Giovanni in the evening to the palazzo of Signora Beatrice to supper. If the artist had given away his feelings for Bianca in her absence he certainly confirmed the matter in her presence. His love was apparent as the sun in heaven.

There seems to be a sixth sense in women that enables them to discern antagonism from members of their own sex. Signora Borgia made a great ado over Bianca, expressing herself as delighted with her and folding her in an embrace. Giovanni, however, noticed a tremor pass over his beloved, and when released from her hostess' arms she was deadly pale. But she soon recovered herself and seemed to be trying to show her appreciation of her reception. When her wraps had been laid aside supper was announced, and the three went into the room where it was laid.

For an hour they continued to partake of a sumptuous repast. The signora pressed her guest to partake of her wines, of which there was a great variety, saying: "Try this; it came from Sorrento and is considered very fine. Here is some from Frascati. Perhaps you will prefer it to the other. This muscatel is delicious." In this way she endeavored to persuade her guests to drink. Bianca sipped the first glass handed her, and nothing could induce her to touch another. She also gave an appealing glance to her lover, which served its purpose, for when the signora placed a glass before him he simply wet his lips with the wine.

Toward the end of the meal the hostess reached for a dish of figs on the center of the table and handed one to each of her guests. Bianca noticed that when the signora handed her a fig she selected it carefully from the dish. Bianca took it and noticed a tiny mark on it so near the color of the fig as scarcely to be distinguished. She left the fruit on her plate without touching it.

"Do you not like figs?" asked the signora.

"I do not care especially for them," was the reply.

Giovanni had broken his fig open and handed it to his sweetheart, saying:

"Try mine, and I will eat yours."

Bianca clapped her hand on the fig on her plate, uttering at the same time a cry. The hostess looked at her as if in astonishment and said:

"Give it to me. I will eat it."

Bianca held it in her clinched hand. "No," she said; "I will take it home and eat it there."

The signora changed from leopardess to lion.

"Give it to me!" she cried imperiously.

Bianca clutched it all the tighter. The signora strove to take it from her. Bianca begged Giovanni to take and keep it. He did so, and the three stood surveying one another with blanched faces and flaming eyes.

The signora ran into another room. Bianca made for an exit, followed by her lover, and when their hostess returned to the supper room with a still letter they had vanished.

"What does it all mean?" asked Giovanni of Bianca.

"The fig is poisoned."

And so it proved on applying a test. Signora Borgia was too powerful to warrant an accusation. Giovanni and Bianca returned at once to Florence. He claimed that a swollen wrist would prevent his doing the mural work ordered by the pope and refused to return to Rome.

Of course this refusal was not to be maintained if the pope chose to enforce the order. The holy father would not have done so had not Signora Borgia circulated a report that the swollen wrist was a mere pretext to avoid returning to Rome. This report coming to the pope's ears, he ordered Giovanni to return on pain of incurring the displeasure of the head of the church. In Rome he would be examined by a physician and if his wrist was in a condition to prevent his using a brush he would be excused.

When Giovanni received this new order he bethought himself how to evade it. Signora Borgia's attempt to poison his sweetheart would not be accepted as a reason for defying the head of the church. He purposely wrenched his wrist so that it would require months to heal. Then he went to Rome, was examined and excused What's the Answer?

Fifty years ago two-thirds of all Americans lived on farms. Today but one-third lives in the country. How do you explain it when every year life on the farm grows easier and every year it becomes harder in the city?

To Avoid Smoke.

Simple way of avoiding the smoke and gas which always pour into the room when a fire is lit in a stove, heater or fireplace on a damp day: Put in the wood and coal as usual, but before lighting them ignite a handful of paper or shavings placed on top of the coal. This produces a current of hot air in the chimney, which draws up the smoke and gas at once.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Hobart and son, Stewart, were at their camp at New Ipswich, N. H., over the Fourth.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wolfe have gone to Chester, Penn., where he has taken a position.

—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Long of Worcester have been visiting her mother, Mrs. Maria Hart of Elm avenue.

—John Smith, a prominent member of the Ward 3 social club who has been in Brooklyn, N. Y. for some weeks where he has charge of a large shipyard, was in town over the Fourth and the night before was given a reception by the members of the club.

—John DeNeil, travelling inspector for the Electric Boat Company of New London, Conn., has been spending a few days with his mother, Mrs. Richard DeNeil.

—Russell Dextheimer was cranking an automobile on Fourth of July afternoon when it "kicked" breaking his right wrist. He was attended by Dr. N. V. Mullin and taken to the Massachusetts General hospital, Boston, where the fracture was reduced.

—Charles E. Leavitt, who holds a responsible position in Brooklyn Navy yard was home over the Fourth.

—Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Houghton, (nee Elizabeth Hennessey) are home from their honeymoon and have taken up their residence in the Guttererson house on Commercial street.

—Miss Elizabeth Kiley of Randolph has been visiting the Misses Nash of Broad street.

—Richmond Nash of Boston, a former resident, spent several days this week with his brother, Robert Nash.

—Lee Lawrence and Walter Fraser started yesterday for Montreal in the former's automobile.

—John Dolan, while at work at work at the E. S. Hunt & Sons' laboratory, Monday, fell from the roof of a building 80 feet to the ground. He sustained a sprained right ankle and other injuries that will confine him to his home for sometime.

—Edward Drown is spending his vacation at Bradford, N. H.

—John Crosby of Wilmington, Del., has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sweeney of Franklin street.

—Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Clarke (Miss Alice M. Nash) of New London, Conn., former residents of this town, have been here on a visit to friends.

—On the night before the Fourth boys set fire to the old dilapidated building on Quincy avenue, formerly occupied by the street railway company as a waiting room. The building has been set afire before and always quickly extinguished. This time it gained more headway, and is quite badly gutted, so much so, that citizens are in hopes that the street railway company will remove the old trap which has been an eye sore for several years.

—Lyman Williams and granddaughter, Gladys Kelley, are visiting his son, Harold Williams in Portland, Maine.

—Next Sunday at the 10.30 a. m. service in Trinity church, Rev. William Hyde will preach on the Prophecy concerning Lucifer in Isaiah XIV Chapter.

OBSERVES FIRST SOLEMN HIGH MASS.

Rev. William J. Gunville Celebrant at Sacred Heart Church, Weymouth, Last Sunday.

Rev. William J. Gunville, C. M., celebrated his first solemn high mass last Sunday morning in the Church of the Sacred Heart at Weymouth. Rev. Fr. Gunville was ordained a priest in the Chapel of Immaculate Conception of St. Vincent's Seminary at Germantown, Penn., last Friday.

Rev. James Owens of St. John's church, Quincy, was deacon and Rev. John B. Holland, rector of the church, sub-deacon. The master of ceremonies was Condon Dalton of St. John's Seminary, Brighton; the acolytes, John Gunville and Joseph Gunville, nephews of Fr. Gunville, and the thurifer was Francis Gunville, another nephew. The sermon was delivered by Fr. Holland.

In the sanctuary were John Garrick of Somerville, Richard Quinlan of Whitman, William O'Connor of Roxbury and John Sherrin of Somerville, all of St. John's Seminary, Brighton. A special musical program under the direction of Mrs. John W. Hanley was rendered.

Fr. Gunville was born in Quincy, Sept. 9, 1888, the son of Mr. and Mrs. David A. Gunville. When he was 3 years old the family moved to Weymouth, where he has since made his home. In 1905 he entered St. Vincent's Seminary, Germantown, and remained there until his ordination.

Fr. Gunville will spend two weeks with his parents at Elmwood park, East Braintree, before beginning active work.

TOWN BUSINESS.

Selectmen's Business and Other Departments of Work and Expenditures.

On account of Fourth of July coming on the first Tuesday of the month, the day for the regular meeting of the selectmen at the Town Home, it was held this week, Tuesday, July 11.

Much of the time of the board was taken up with the jury list, new names being added and names being taken off of those who have passed the age limit and those who have served on juries during the year.

The board authorized Supt. of Streets Johnson to sell the old stone crusher, located at Dwyer's gravel pit on Washington street, corner of Main.

The problem of draining Main street, South Weymouth, opposite Dyer's laundry came in for a lot of discussion and it was voted to get the advice of Town Council Worthen in regard to the best method of procedure.

James July of 30 Lake street was given permit to dig clams.

Melville S. Raymond; Buried.

The funeral of Melville S. Raymond, 66 years old of 307 Pleasant street, South Weymouth, took place at his late home on Monday afternoon. Rev. Fred A. Line of the Second Universalist church conducted the services. The bearers were Ritchie T. Howe, William J. Holbrook, J. Frank Green and Thomas Leary. The interment was at Mount Hope cemetery where Rev. Mr. Line officiated at the committal service.

L. O. M. C. Lawn Party.

The Women's Loyal Circle connected with Weymouth Lodge L. O. M. held a lawn party on Wednesday afternoon and evening, at the field near Ponlin's turn-out on North street, North Weymouth. The grounds were lighted by various colored electric lights strung around the field. Dancing was indulged in during the evening, with refreshments of all kinds on sale at various booths around the field.

WOOD—HASTINGS.

East Weymouth Man Weds Weymouth Landing Girl.

Evelyn M. Hastings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Glover of Weymouth was united in marriage last Monday night at eight o'clock to John J. Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wood of East Weymouth.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Albert P. Watson, pastor of the Union Congregational church of Weymouth and East Braintree.

The bride was gown in white lace over white silk. Two neices of the bride, Miss Evelyn and Miss Beatrice Glover were ring bearers.

The groom was attended by Willard R. Glover, a cousin of the bride and Stanley Nadell.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood will be at home after August 7.

HOLD CELEBRATION.

Worst Thunder Shower In Years Does Not Faze South Weymouth Committee.

Once again on Saturday old King J. Pluvius came with his cohorts to South Weymouth to interfere with the postponed celebration of the Fourth. However President Gerstley and his staff of assisting officers were not to be denied this time. Midst the roaring of the thunder and the flashes of the lightning the committee went about their work of putting through the program as if the weather was ideal.

The automobile parade brought out a number of machines and the judges awarded first prize to the car belonging to Raymond Procter, which was banked with ferns and with myriads of yellow roses on it.

Second prize was awarded J. Burton Reed for his car banked with oak leaves and pink roses.

The third and special prize offered by the Weymouth Board of Trade was awarded to the float of the Campfire Girls, which represented the two activities of the organization, caring for the little ones and camping life. Oswald Ralph the florist, donated myriads of pinks which the girls sold, netting the sum of $23, which will be used to defray the expenses of their outing this week in Maine.

At one o'clock there was a ball game between the Mt. Pleasants of Weymouth and the Nash's Corner Giants which the Weymouth boys won 7 to 0.

A second game, this between the White Sox of South Weymouth and the Hanover A. A. was started but was called off account of the rain in the third inning with the White Sox leading 3 to 0.

The Old Colony Driving Club started its afternoon program, but were forced to give up the most of the program on account of the storm.

Milo Burke's band entertained in the afternoon and evening with concerts. At 8:30 there was an elaborate display of fireworks and it is said by witnesses that it was the grandest display ever held in town. In spite of the bad weather everybody had a grand good time and South Weymouth's big celebration was a fine success all along the line.

CELEBRATES 21ST BIRTHDAY.

450 Guests at Party in Bates' Opera House. Mayor of Quincy and Family Special Guests.

Surrounded by a gathering of over 450 well wishing friends and relatives, C. Irving Bates, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Bates of Commercial street, East Braintree celebrated his twenty-first birthday in Bates Opera House, Washington Square last Friday evening.

The festivities took the form of a dancing party, with special dances in large volume. Moonlight waltzes, "spot light hops," one-steps and the usual run of old and new steps made up the order.

The hall was tastily decorated with baskets of trailing brier, pink crepe paper, ferns, hydrangeas and varied colored lights.

Shaw's six piece orchestra furnished music. Mr. Bates with Miss Evelyn Floyd, led the grand march.

During the evening a luncheon was served. Special guests included Mayor and Mrs. Gustave B. Bates and family of Quincy.

The affair was one of the most enjoyable social events of the year.

PHILIP DELOREY AT REST.

Victim of Lightning Last Saturday. Buried on Tuesday.

The funeral of Philip Delorey, who was instantly killed by lightning last Saturday, was held last Tuesday morning with services in the Immaculate Conception church in East Weymouth. At the solemn high mass of requiem, Rev. C. J. Riordan, rector, was the celebrant; Rev. William J. Granville, C. M. deacon; Rev. James Siney assistant rector, subdeacon; Condon Dalton of St. John's seminary, Brighton, master of ceremonies. The music was by the church choir with Miss Nellie F. Noonan as organist and musical director. Simon Hurley, William Delorey, Benjamin White, Joseph Pitts, William Keezer and Paul Delorey were the bearers.

JOINT PICNIC.

North Weymouth, Weymouth Heights and East Weymouth Churches Enjoy Fine Program At Fair Grounds.

The Sunday schools of the old North Congregational Church at Weymouth Heights, Pilgrim Congregational and the Third Universalist Churches of North Weymouth and the East Weymouth Congregational church held a picnic on the grounds of the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Society at South Weymouth yesterday with an attendance of 300 scholars, teachers and officers, making the first of a series of union picnics a success.

The committee consisted of John T. Dizer, Robert S. Gilmore, John A. MacFaun, John B. Merrill, Clifford Stiles and Aldrich Brown. Cakes, ices and peanuts were distributed and there were basket lunches in the grove.

FUNERAL TO-MORROW.

Mrs. Simeon Bearce One of Town's Oldest Residents Passes Away After Long Weakening Illness.

Mrs. Mary Jane (Dillaway) Bearce, widow of Simeon Bearce, passed away Wednesday night at her home, 622 Broad street, East Weymouth, at the age of 87 years.

Mrs. Bearce was born in Boston but most of her life has been spent in this town. She is survived by two sons, George H. of Brockton and Frank L., of South Weymouth, one daughter Miss Jennie Bearce, who lived with and cared for her mother for many years up to the time of her death; and six grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon at her home at 2:30 o'clock.

Point of View.

"I am proud to say," remarked the party with the unbarbered hair, "that I was never intoxicated in my life." "That strikes me, suh," rejoined Colonel Boozie of Kentucky, "as being rather an empty honor, suh."

MAN KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Saturday's Storm Claims Victim at Weymouth Heights. Much Damage About Town.

One man was killed, several people stunned and much damage in varied forms was wrought about town last Saturday afternoon and evening during the severest thunderstorm of the year.

The victim of the lightning was Philip Delorey, age 55 years of 446 Commercial street, Weymouth Heights. He was married and the father of one son and a daughter.

Delorey was making hay with four other men near a barn on the estate of Edward J. Jordan, 182 Green street, North Weymouth, about 3:20 when the storm started. He and his fellow workmen sought shelter in the barn. The other four men were Benjamin Litchfield, Charles Hanson, James Desandro and Elijah Sullivan.

Delorey and Sullivan were sitting on a wagon inside the barn, when a bolt hit the structure and set it on fire. Delorey was killed instantly and fell off the wagon to the floor. Sullivan was badly stunned, but not seriously hurt. The other men were considerably dazed by the shock.

District Chief John Q. Hunt was in the vicinity and he rang in an alarm. He then ran to the burning barn and assisted in removing the body of Delorey. Medical Examiner J. C. Fraser, who viewed the body, said that death had apparently been instantaneous, though the only marks on the body were contusions resulting from the fall from the wagon.

The barn and hay stored in it, with two henhouses were entirely consumed. The quick run of the Ward 1 Combination saved the Jordan house, which was close by the barn.

HITS CHURCH IN E. WEYMOUTH.

The storm continued intermittently until after eight o'clock. During the evening lightning struck the cross on the spire of the Immaculate Conception church, East Weymouth, ran down the spire to the belfry where it tore off several shingles and then disappeared inside the belfry and left no further traces of damage.

CHARLES STREET HOUSE STRUCK
A house on Charles street, East Weymouth was also struck during the afternoon's electrical flashes. Chimney struck, saddle board torn off and shingles loosened.

MUCH OTHER DAMAGE

Several telephone lines were put out of commission, the electric light wires were out of order for a short time, the Stetson Shoe Co. and the Edwin Clapp factories were forced to shut down, after the lightning struck a pole near the Clapp factory, demolishing the current for these two factories, many Bay State Railway open cars were burnt out and various other damage was manifest about town.

Several of our oldest citizens say that it was the worst storm in some parts of the town for years. The attendant severe rain caused considerable trouble with drains, etc. and in some parts of the town men were out a large part of the night getting gutters and drains cleared out to take away the overflow of water.

NORFOLK, ss. PROBATE COURT

TO the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of

ELIZABETH C. HAWES,

late of Weymouth, in said County, deceased:

WHEREAS, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court for Probate by Martha J. Hawes of said Weymouth, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her, the executrix therein named, without giving surety on her official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Brookline in said County of Norfolk, on the twenty-sixth day of July A. D. 1916, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation, once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Weymouth Gazette, a newspaper published in said Weymouth, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court, and by mailing, post-paid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this thirteenth day of June A. D. 1916.

17-19 J. R. McCOOLE, Register.

Facetious.

"Whenever I have been sure I was right have stuck to it," said the philosopher. "How did that plan work out when you had an argument with your wife?" asked a facetious member of the audience.

No Cause for Complaint.

"My good man," said the philosopher to the laborer who was amputating weeds from a piece of vacant real estate, "do you ever have occasion to complain of your lot?" "No, sir," answered the honest son of toil. "I don't own this lot."

A Saving Man.

If the fame of all great men were sung one member of our community would be known far beyond the circle of family and friends. We believe that in one regard he has few equals. Give him something to save for, something not too far off and not too vague, and he will keep the money in his pockets until it is black with pocket wear.

He has saved money for several yards of finely bound books, one or two volumes of which he has actually read. He has saved money with which to join secret orders and uniforms thereof. By frugal attention to pennies and nickels, paying an expense here, making a rigid self denial there, he has saved the price of an automobile. In March he begins to save for vacation, and along about August he begins saving for Christmas.

But our friend cannot save for a rainy day. He cannot save for investment. There has never been a serious thought in his mind about old age, impairment of working and earning powers, sickness and unemployment.—Toledo Blade.

During a Thunderstorm.

Do not use the telephone. The telephone wires may receive a heavy charge.

Keep away from stoves, radiators and the like. They are large metallic masses, likely to become heavily charged.

Avoid screen doors or other metallic bodies connecting with the exterior of the building.

Keep away from chimneys and open screened windows.

Out of doors the most dangerous places are under isolated trees and near wire fences in open fields.

Small sheds and other shelters are dangerous if isolated from larger buildings.

Thick timber is undoubtedly the safest place to seek out of doors, since a single tree in a forest is not so likely to receive a stroke as a single person or an object in an open space of equal area.—Country Gentleman.

Sarsaparilla in Porto Rico.

Sarsaparilla grows all over the island of Porto Rico. It is in common use and "jibaros" peddling it in small bundles are to be seen constantly. It is used for medicinal purposes, brewed in the form of various teas and other decoctions, and also steeped in rum.

ON THE FARM

Subscribe for this paper. This column alone is worth more than $2.00 a year if you have a garden or keep a horse, cow, pigs or hens.

The height of the fly season is now approaching. Screens on your dairy barn mean more milk, better milk and less feed.

Don't keep your cucumbers screened too long or the bees will not be able to fertilize the blossoms.

Many people think they are doing well for their hens or chickens when they give them the rakings from a fresh mowed lawn. This is a serious error, for the grass thus eaten will very soon make a hen or chick crop bound.

Don't get the notion that there won't be many lice and mites this year, just because the season has been cool and not many have shown up so far. They will come during hot weather, you may be sure, and every one you kill now is worth 100,000 later in the season. Keep spraying the poultry house with a good lice killer, and so keep ahead of the pests.

There is one crop which is being used for pasture purposes with great profit. That crop is alfalfa. When a short time ago it was hard to get farmers to try alfalfa it was spoken of as a hay crop and not as a pasture crop. They thought they had given alfalfa a good trial when they sowed a little of it and turned the stock in as soon as it was 6 inches high and kept them there until the alfalfa disappeared. The first thing to do when preparing soil for alfalfa is to manure it heavily and plant to a crop which will be cultivated and thus kill the weeds.

Moderate rainfall in late May and liberal rains in June, 1915, caused an usual development of fruit buds, which will produce this year's apple crop. The buds for the 1917 crop are now forming, and at this time the trees require an abundance of plant food and moisture. Proper care of the orchard is more important this year because of excessive blooming and of a possible drought.

No farmer is prepared to raise hogs profitably unless he is well provided with pasture. The pasture should be so managed that it affords tender and palatable forage. Grasses are succulent and rich in muscle and bone-forming materials, but the most important consideration in favor of pasture for swine in summer is its small cost. The earlier in the year green feed can be supplied the better. Swine of any age relish green feed, and its use always reduces the cost of producing gains in weight. In addition, it keeps the animals in good, thrifty condition.

Seed barley which is mixed with wild oats and wild buckwheat will not raise a profitable crop. Severe screening of seed barley is in itself a profitable thing. The greatest trick of the whole thing is to take out the wild oats and other weed seeds, then they can't get back into the land again. It is folly to plant seeds which are full of trash. Barley is a more profitable crop than oats, but it must be kept pure and must not be allowed to become contaminated with all sorts of mixtures or it will be ruined so far as malting is concerned.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Treating Hives.

An attack of hives has usually a beginning in some carelessness due to eating. It is a very common thing to mix up indigestible foods in one's dietary. The partaking of foods which cause indigestion must be avoided. Nothing destroys the appearance of the skin more readily than repeated bilious attacks, which are always brought on by injudicious eating. The skin becomes thick, yellowish and pasty looking and many times covered with an eruption known as urticaria or hives. The hives will quickly disappear if a good purgative medicine is taken, such as the effervescent citrate of magnesia, a half glass three times a day between meals for a day or two, or the effervescent phosphate of sodium, two heaping teaspoonfuls in a tumbler of cold water three times a day half an hour before meals. The itching of the skin will be relieved by bathing the skin several times a day with a mixture composed of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls, and hot water, four tablespoonfuls.

SUMMER COTTAGE BURNS.

Harbor Villa Scene of Destructive Blaze Last Friday Morning.

A summer cottage at Harbor Villa East Braintree, was entirely destroyed by fire last Friday morning and Mrs. Edward W. Graves its owner and sole occupant had a very narrow escape from death.

The fire is said to have caught from the fire place and the entire structure was afire when Mrs. Graves awoke about two o'clock Friday morning. She rushed through the sheet of flame and hastened to the home of a neighbor from whence a call for the apparatus was sent in. Chief Tenney and the auto combination responded, but the fire had gained such headway that the bungalow was practically destroyed.

In Pythian hall Weymouth Landing last Friday night the pupils of Miss Margaret Ahearn gave a pleasing concert of piano music. Among those taking part were: George Preston, Nora Frasier, Isabelle Cilley, Gertrude Carroll, Josephine Lavery, Agnes Ryan, Alice Anderson Florence Bowman, Margaret Langford, Gertrude McCarthy Eunice Fogarty, Edna Dowd, Lillian Gilday, Cecelia Hennebury and Mary Powers.

Warning to Parents.

Commissioner Allan J. McLaughlin, of the State Department of Health sends out this bit of warning to parents of children:

"Keep your children away from strangers and don't let them go to places of amusement for the present, if you don't wish them to contract infantile paralysis."

Two children who arrived in Boston Thursday from New York and were met by inspectors of the municipal Board of Health and examined will be kept under observation for some time, as they are known to have been recently associated with victims of the disease.

Commissioner McLaughlin has learned that a New York Charitable Society has sent a group of children to Stockbridge, this State, for a vacation, and he has provided for their being carefully watched.

The State Health Department has sent a circular to all city Boards of Health in the State, reciting that many New York parents are taking their children out of that city to avoid infection from infantile paralysis and they may introduce the disease into Massachusetts. Local health officials are warned to be on the watch for any suspicious cases of illness.

Napoleon and a Submarine.

The idea of submarine navigation is not so modern as many people imagine. When Napoleon was banished to St. Helena a notorious smuggler named Johnstone conceived the idea of assisting the dethroned monarch to escape.

In Scott's "Life of Napoleon" he says: "A submarine vessel was to be the means of effecting this enterprise. It was thought that by sinking the vessel during the daytime she might escape the notice of the British cruisers and, being raised at night, might approach the guarded rock without discovery. The vessel was actually begun in one of the building yards upon the Thames; but, the peculiarity of her construction having occasioned suspicion, she was seized by the government."

Our First Railroad Train.

On Aug. 28, 1820, the first American built railroad train made its initial journey. The train carried passengers in its one little car and made a trip of fourteen miles in one hour and fifteen minutes, to the utter astonishment of the "natives," who predicted all sorts of dire calamities from such speed madness. This was the beginning of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, the oldest American road.

A Lasting Flower.

A common South African flower, the white star of Bethlehem (Ornithogalum lacteum), will keep fresh for two months or more after cutting. It can be sent as a cut flower from South Africa to Europe or Asia or America, and then will last for weeks in water.

Pruning Trees.

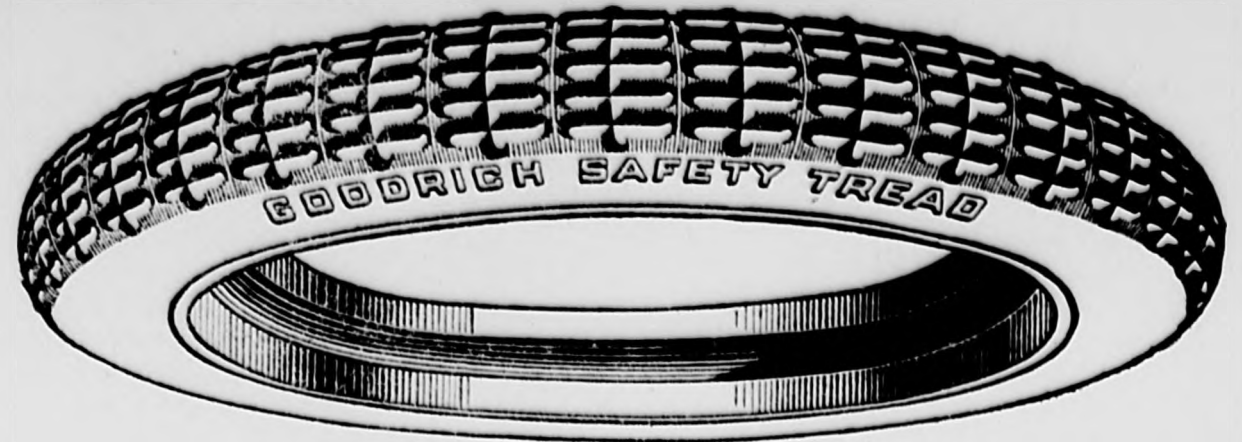

In pruning branches from trees cut them off close up to the origin. Never leave a stub of the portion removed, for the cut surface will never heal over, allowing the decay germs to enter and gradually work into the body of the tree.

Identified.

"You haven't forgotten us, have you, waiter?"
"Oh, no, sir. You are the two fried smelts."—Judge.

Jerks the Heartstrings.

Marjorie—"The boys are simply wild about her and she can't sing at all."
Lillian—"Did you ever see how sweetly she can cry?"

Three Million Auto Tires made— —by GOODRICH, in year 1915

STUDY the Price-List publicly printed below.
Compare with the List-Prices of other Tires made in LESSER Volume.

Observe that competing Prices are higher in almost the exact proportion that VOLUME of production is smaller.

This, when Quality approaches the Goodrich Standard. Cut our 1915 Tire Output (of 3,000,000 Auto and Truck Tires) to One-third, and it would still far exceed the Average of all Competing Makes or Brands.

But, that huge reduction in Volume MIGHT result in every Tire we made costing you One-third MORE than present prices.

They would not,—and could not,—be BETTER Tires, at this necessarily higher-cost to Us, and higher-price to You.

Because,—Goodrich Tires are not made "up to a price,"—nor "down to a price."

WE, first of all, make the BEST Fabric Tires that our 47-year Experience in Rubber-Working,—our huge Purchasing-Power, and the most Advanced Equipment, renders possible.

Then we let Cost fall where it will. To that Cost we add a moderate, and fair, Profit for Ourselves and for our Dealers.

Then we let VOLUME rise,—as it will. The more Tires we Make, the LESS each Tire COSTS us to produce,—and the less it costs YOU to buy them.

The more Tires we Sell, the less profit, per Tire, WE NEED, for dividends. The more Tires we make, the better we KNOW HOW to make them,—the more we have at Stake on Quality,—and Satisfaction to Consumers.

And,—because of all this,—The BEST Fabric Tires that Skill,—Experience,—Good-Faith, and Maximum Volume, can build,—are now available to YOU at the VERY MODERATE Fair-List Prices here quoted.

Why pay more for ANY Fabric Tire?

Rebuked.

The persevering landscape painter knew that he had an observer looking over his shoulder at the easel. He knew from the rustle of skirts that the observer was a woman; yet he worked steadily on. Presently the observer spoke. "A charming landscape," she said. "Ah, you flatter me," said the artist modestly. "Compared with the original landscape it is very poor stuff." "I meant the original," said the observer.

At last accounts, Postmaster General Burleson was said to be contemplating having mail for the soldier boys on the border carried free. From the present outlook Mr. Burleson may take too long in considering the matter—the boys may be back home.

Down on "the Cape" the people and the newspaper have won a good consistent fight in having the unsightly advertising signs in and about the railroad stations removed. These signs ought to be removed right here in Weymouth and several large billboard signs on some of our best scenery also.

The political pot in town has begun to boil considerably earlier this year than ever before. Messrs. Hawes, Spinney, Hoffman and Sullivan are all hot after the office of representative. The merits of each will be freely discussed on our street corners, etc., the next few months and then "may the best man win."

Infantile paralysis, that dread disease which New York physicians have been battling with for the last few weeks, is invading New England. Connecticut has had cases in several of its cities, and now Newton of this state has several cases on its hand. With the warning which the physicians of this section of the state have had in regard to the prevalence of the disease, it is safe to assume that they will be ready to stamp out any outbreak of the dread disease, if it should be found to be among us.

In our travels about town this week we noticed that on several days most of the drinking fountains have been shut off.
Without doubt our water department has good reason for shutting them off, but to the public it is quite a hardship. In East Weymouth one day the first of the week, while the water on, we noticed youngsters literally taking a bath in the drinking fountain. Head in, feet in, hands in, in fact they tried to get in all over but the fountain is too small for that. Therefore while the public may miss the water, the Water Department has considerable provocation in taking any action they see fit to protect their fountains and the water supply. If these youngsters can be stopped from meddling with our fountains, then there is no question that we shall have the water on in our fountains in town.

The postmaster question at North Weymouth is one of the main issues in town at present. Messrs. Tobin, Stoddard and Bailey are in line for the office, all having applied for the position in the regular form. Two Quincy men have also applied, it is reported.
Of the three men in the North Weymouth office, while all three may be familiar with the duties of office, we believe that Mr. Bailey, having been the late Mr. Thomas' assistant so long, besides being a conscientious worker, should get the appointment. While we are not expertly advised on the duties of the position, it seems as if a clerk, right in the office, should be better acquainted with the routine necessary than a carrier who is outside most of the time.

CORRECTION.

Through an error in our last week's issue, the card party announced for Tuesday afternoon, July 11, under the auspices of the Monday club at the North Weymouth Yacht club, should have been carded for next week Tuesday, July 18.

NORTH WEYMOUTH.

—All along the shore from Monatiquot Bluffs to Rose Cliff, a scene of much activity is noticed now that summer and the vacational period is here. The past two weeks have seen innumerable additions to the number of yachts, power boats, rowing canoes and tenders. Festivities on shore are also at midseason form, every night witnessing some interesting event in the club houses or cottages.

—Mrs. Sherman of Newport, R. I., is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. R. P.
Hesse.

—Dr. W. A. Drake, Mrs. Drake and Wallace Drake left yesterday for a two weeks' vacation at Weymouth cottage, Lake Pennessewassee, Norway, Maine.

—Miss Mabel Smith is having a month's vacation from her duties in "Hollanders."

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stetson were guests of their niece, Mrs. T. Aldridge last week.

—The ladies' auxiliary to King Cove Boat club held an all day meeting at the club house on Wednesday. A covered dish lunch was served.

—Harold and Alice Morgan with their aunt, Miss Hattie Lincoln, went to Sebec, Maine, on Tuesday, to spend the rest of the summer with their grandfather.

—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Tyler are being congratulated on the recent arrival of a granddaughter born on Friday last to Mr.
and Mrs. Amory Tyler of Waltham.

—The ladies' circle connected with the Universalist church held its annual picnic on Thursday of last week. Other years they have held it at Fort Point but this year they hired the King Cove boat club house and found it an ideal spot for such an event. A clam chowder was served at noon with various desserts. Bathing and boating was enjoyed by some while the rest quietly enjoyed the outing of rest and recreation.

—Edith Smith of Dorchester is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. C. C. Howland for a few weeks.

—Mrs. Willis Keene and daughter Phyllis are spending the week with Mrs.
Keene's mother in Norwell.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Oliver and daughter, Marguerite of Concordia, Kansas, are the guests for the month of Mrs. Oliver's mother, Mrs. Edward Harrow of Saunders street.

—Joseph Delorey of Norton street is visiting relatives in Nova Scotia.

—Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Cain, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Cain and Miss Ethel Cain enjoyed an auto trip to Portland, Me., this week.

—At the Pilgrim church twilight lawn services are being held Sunday evenings at 6.30 o'clock. The Y. P. C. E. have charge of the music. Next Sunday evening George E. Whitaker, publisher of the Zion's Herald, will speak on the subject
"What does Education Mean?"

—Mrs. Alton Jones of Brockton is spending the week with her parents on Lincoln street.

—Rev. William J. Gunville C. M. ordained as priest in the Chapel of the Immaculate Conception of St. Vincent's Seminary at Germantown, Penn., last Friday was a resident of North Weymouth for seventeen years and his friends will be pleased to learn that he will celebrate Solemn High Mass at St. Jerome's church, North Weymouth, next Sunday morning at 9 o'clock.

—Mrs. Johnson Kilpatrick has been entertaining her mother and sister from Norfolk.

—The Universalist church closed last Sunday until the second Sunday in September. This church is closed perhaps longer than any of the other churches in town, but any church situated as this one is with an afternoon service which they are obliged to hold instead of a morning one, would find it wholly impossible to hold services during July and August.

The noise of the electric cars which pass every ten minutes on one side of the church, together with the regular Sunday parade of automobiles on Bridge street, combine in covering any man's voice.

—One of Cushing's heavily loaded ice teams had a narrow escape last Saturday when it was making a dangerous curve and trying to avoid hitting a woman and child, on Wessagussett hill. The wagon nearly went over the edge to the beach below, where many bathers were in the water. With the help of several men the wagon was got back on the road, with little damage to the outfit.

Wessagussett Yacht Club Notes.

At the Wessagussett Yacht club on Tuesday afternoon of this week the ladies held their regular weekly whist, both straight whist and bridge being played.

Mrs. Hight and Mrs. Hagan won the prizes in straight whist while a guest of Mrs.
Wescott and Mrs. Rayworth won the prizes at bridge.

On Wednesday evening the annual reception to the officers by members was held.

North Weymouth Yacht Club Notes.

On Saturday evening last the weekly dance was as usual well attended.

On Tuesday evening of this week there was a dance held for members, their families and home guests. Richards' 4 piece orchestra is furnishing music for these parties.

Wednesday afternoon the ladies opened up the reason with a musicale and whist party from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Last evening the opening club smoker took place with a talk illustrated by stereopticon views by Mr. Burns of the Cunard Steamship line. Mr. Burns brought with him a soloist and accompanist.

SECRETS OF SPACE

What Might Be Revealed if Nature Lifted the Veil.

WONDERS OF THE INVISIBLE.

Evidence That What We Call the Universe Is Only a Part of a Far Grander and Perhaps Infinite System of Suns and Worlds and Planets.

Men of science have found reasons for believing that there may be, far off in infinite space, other material systems besides the one visible to us.
We seem to be able with modern telescopes to reach the boundaries or farthest limits of the stellar system to which our sun belongs.

It is found that with increase of distance the relative number of stars decreases until, in most directions at least, a point is reached beyond which virtually no more stars can be seen.
Then, too, it has been found that the stellar system has a fairly definite shape—a fact which in itself implies boundaries. The shape is that of a vast spiral, with curving arms surrounding a central agglomeration. If you will imagine floating in the middle of the room where you sit a roughly globular swarm of bright particles, distributed with a fair degree of uniformity as to distance from one another, and then outside of the swarm surrounding it, but separated from it by a space which is nearly but not quite empty, an irregular spiral ring of similar shining particles, you will have before you a picture of one of the latest astronomical conceptions of the form of the visible universe.

The central swarm will represent the assemblage of stars of which our sun is a modest member, while the enveloping spiral will represent the immense system of the Milky way, whose stars are vastly more numerous than those composing the globular swarm.
The stars of the Milky way are the most distant members of the entire system, which appears to be shut in all around by black space. Viewed from afar off in the ebon depths of that space, this universe of ours would resemble a phosphorescent jellyfish, with faintly sparkling tentacles, adrift in the sea of immensity.

This being so, the question naturally arises, May there not be, or must there not be, an indefinite number of other such systems scattered through the limitless expanse of space? That question would forever remain a matter of pure conjecture if we did not have certain very suggestive facts which seem to indicate that it ought to be answered in the affirmative.

The facts of which I speak are objects of visual observation. But that does not necessarily make them parts of the "visible universe," because they appear to be unconnected with it and to lie beyond its boundaries.

These objects are known as spiral nebulae. The photographs that have been made of them in the past few years are simply amazing. The forms of many are surprisingly like that which has been described above as characterizing the stellar system. They have central agglomerations with enveloping spirals. They have knots of light which recall the globular clusters of stars found in the visible universe, but they are so distant that no separate stars can be detected in them.

They look like masses of more or less condensed glowing gas, but the spectroscope shows that the light coming from them is not that which is characteristic of gaseous nebulae, but that which belongs to true stars. The influence is that these wonderful objects may actually be other universes lying out in the ocean of space beyond our shores.

This inference is strengthened by what we know of the distance of some of these objects. The utmost diameter of the great spiral of the Milky way probably does not exceed from 4,000 to 6,000 "parsecs," or from 800 to 1,200 million times the earth's distance from the sun. A parsec, which corresponds to a parallax of one second of arc, equals about 19,000,000,000,000 (nineteen trillion) miles. But some of the spiral nebulae appear to be at least 10,000 parsecs distant.

If that is so there exists between them and the outer frontiers of the visible universe a gap far broader than the entire diameter of that universe. It can hardly be supposed, then, that they are outlying parts of or attendants upon our universe, but it is much more reasonable to conclude that they are other universes constructed on a similar plan, but so far away that as viewed with our utmost visual powers, our mightiest telescopes, they are but gleaming specks! Perhaps the nearest of these strange objects is the Androm-eda nebula, which, in a small telescope, looks like a faint spindle shaped wisp.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

HELPFUL WORDS.

From a Weymouth Citizen.

Is your back lame and painful?
Does it ache especially after exertion?
Is there a soreness in the kidney region?
These symptoms suggest weak kidneys
If so there is danger in delay.
Weak kidneys get fast weaker.
Give your trouble prompt attention.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Your neighbors use and recommend them.

Read this Weymouth testimony.

Mrs. James P. Burns, 12 Granite streets Weymouth, says: "My back and head ached and I had dizzy spells. My kidneys were weak, too. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they soon made me strong and well." (Statement given in August 1911.)

On April 3, 1916 Mrs. Burns added: "I can say a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills at all times for they have given me fine benefit every time I have used them."

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Helen L. (Dunbar) Saunders, Well-known Soloist Passes Away in Mattapan.

Mrs. Helen (Dunbar) Sanders, daughter of James M. Dunbar died on last Friday night in a Consumptive Hospital in Mattapan, having fought her affliction till every ounce of her strength had been exhausted. Her father was at her bedside on that afternoon and fully realized the inevitable.

Beside husband and father she leaves two sisters Mrs. Edward E. Orr of Middle street and Mrs. Mary B. Kilburn of Myrtle street, East Weymouth. The deceased was well known in musical circles and was a choir singer at one time in the East Weymouth Congregational church.

The funeral of Mrs. Helen L. (Dunbar) Sanders was held at the home of her sister, 20 Myrtle street East Weymouth last Monday afternoon. The service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Edward T. Ford of the Congregational church, of which Mrs. Sanders was a member and a former member of the choir, Mrs. Evelyn Philbrook Sherman sang "Passing Out of the Shadow" and "Face to Face."

The bearers were Charles Sanders, Edward Orr, Everett Gardner and Charles Kilburn. Burial was in the Fore Hill Cemetery at Hingham.

WILL YOU HELP?

Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association In Need of Funds to Care for Families of Men Now At Mexico.

On June 26th, Governor McCall summoned to the Council Chamber certain citizens, men and women of our state, and requested them to organize the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association for the purpose of helping the women and children of the men called to military service by the President of the United States, who receive no adequate assistance from their employers and to assist these men in every needed way.

The committee of citizens summoned has organized as directed and has taken up the work with diligence and zeal. Everyone has been invited to become a member of the Association by subscribing one dollar or more and the committee is now engaged in giving help, acting only after the most careful inquiry.

Subscriptions large and small have been invited and some money has been raised but not nearly enough to carry on the work which has been proven to be necessary. As many families are actually without food and money, subscriptions are needed immediately.

So long as our men are in service, war or no war, many of their families need help and the committee asks our citizens to send their subscriptions at once to George C. Lee, Treasurer, 50 State Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Yacht and Fishing Smack Race For Love, and Both Win.

By DAVID WATSON

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

The Daybreak slipped out of muddy Allamakee canal in tow of her polished mahogany launch just as an omnivorous fog sifted in from Hampton roads. Commodore Keelson's trim schooner yacht was on the way via the inside route from his leafy winter home at Ortona, Fla., to his cool summer retreat at Rivermouth, on the Maine coast.

Needless to say the owner was not aboard.

Captain Martin Gale, her fat little sailing master, wasn't going to cry baby at a little fog, especially as he was his own boss for the time being. So he pointed her down the ship channel through a thick weather bedlam of whistles, horns and bells, into which her own patent hair raiser boomed its own doleful contribution.

"WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT JENNIE HILBERT?" HE DEMANDED.

Off Hampton while the skipper was debating with the mate whether to anchor inside Old Point or to keep on up the bay two bare spars loomed in the smother straight ahead. An instant later, with two helms rolling vainly hard over and two anchors rumbling down under foot, the yacht had side-swiped the stranger with a bump that made both craft reel.

The funny part of it was that Captain Gale, bellowing an impotent warning through his megaphone, had instantly recognized in the other vessel a Gloucester fisherman commanded by an old townsman of his, whom he had not seen since he gave up fish killing for the lure of blue broadcloth and the grip of a brass bound wheel.

In fact, the recognition was mutual. But the greeting of brawny Captain Andrew Sponson of the White Sea lacked some of the spontaneous cordiality called for by a five years' separation. He looked over and took stock of damage, then remarked:

"What do ye think ye're doin'?" Sponson's churlishness should be explained lest he make enemies. In the month since the White Sea had come south with a fleet of sealers to convoy the seething shoals of mackerel on their annual jaunt up the coast from Hatteras she hadn't made enough to keep her crew of eighteen in shoelaces. All this didn't look much like Sponson's getting married in June to the finest girl in Gloucester, and here he was with another repair bill on his hands.

"Sponson was allus as full of sass as an egg is of meat," Gale assured his mate loudly as the vessels drifted apart and swung to their anchors.

The peaceably disposed Gale later bearded the fishing schooner in his gig for a chat with his old shipmate. But Sponson, brooding over his lean season and with his crew of huskies discussing afresh "the White Sea's luck," was not a very cheerful companion.

"I'm hoodooed, that's the long and short of it," he declared. "I call'te I couldn't have found him between Fort Monroe and Wolloughby beach to git by your hooker."

"All there is to it, Andy," said Gale sympathetically, "you've got to git a decent vessel. How in Sam Hill do ye expect to git around with the rest of the fleet in a rusty old trap that can't git out of her own way, let alone nobody else's?"

"You wouldn't by no chance want to sail that flat bottomed catamaran of yours with the White Sea, would ye?" he inquired with elaborate politeness, waving an eleven inch hand toward the port hole which framed the handsome Daybreak, dim in the fog.

"By golly, I'd like to oblige ye," said the gold braided yacht captain, "but we're takin' things easy this trip, goin' up the inside route."

"All the more reason why ye can spare a little time," jeered Sponson. "Think up a better excuse than that. Owner won't let ye, truth was known."

"Well, I don't mind givin' ye a go out here in the roads in the mornin', if it's clear," conceded Gale.

"Bah!" snorted the misanthrope. "I don't mind admittin' to ye that there's only one thing I'd like to do now more than wallop this old box of yours, and that is—"

"To git enough to eat for once!" finished Sponson sententiously.

"—and that is to drop into Gloshter and set down into that easy chair in the nor'-west corner of Jennie Hilbert's parlor," continued Gale confidentially, overlooking his host's rudeness.

"What do you know about Jennie Hilbert?" he demanded. "It jest happens that me and Jennie Hilbert—"

"Why, man, you jest keep out of Jennie Hilbert's parlor!"

"My poor feller," said Gale, "I'm afraid your hard luck's gone to your head. Now, if I took ye anyways but a joke, I could show ye somethin'—and dinged if I don't!"

He tore open his ample blue coat and yanked a fragrant wad of pink envelopes from a tight breast pocket. A faint perfume filled the smoky cabin. While a pudgy fist guarded the precious documents Sponson was allowed to gaze for a brief instant at the magic words:

"Your ownest Jennie."

"You got anything you want to perduce as evidence ag'in that?" demanded Gale triumphantly.

As if in a daze Sponson drew out another bundle of letters in identical stationery and Gale stared at the fateful line:

"Always your own Jennie."

"I don't bite for a cent!" snuffed Gale. "The writin's different."

"The perfumery ain't," said Sponson, with something like a groan, "and it's easy enough to change handwritin'."

"Oh, have it your own way, ye big leg and arm factory!" said Gale wearily. "We won't have to fight about it. She'll tell ye where you git off fast enough when ye git back to Gloshter."

"You pile out of here or we will be fightin' about it!" shouted Sponson.

"Well, I must be gittin' back aboard. What time do ye call'te to git out of here in the mornin', Sponson—that is, allowin' it clears?"

Sponson appeared not to have heard for a moment. Then he said absently: "Oh, not till the tide ebbs—8 o'clock, I call'te, allowin' it clears."

"Well, good luck! Sorry we couldn't fix up that little race," said Gale, seemingly anxious to heal the breach.

As Sponson was ostensibly only going out to the grounds again to dog the mackerel there seemed no reason why her crew should have got her under way so stealthily when the silvery moon rays leaked through the first rift in the clouds about midnight.

And as Gale was avowedly going home leisurely through the canals there seemed no excuse why he should have followed the Gloucester man to sea so feverishly when the anchor watch routed him out and apprised him of her departure.

The inference is that Captain Gale and Captain Sponson "knew" each other of old.

Four days later the schooner-yacht Daybreak boiled in past rocky Montauk Point wing and wing before a southwesterly gale.

She certainly hadn't passed the last few days in "dawdling among the lily pads." The planking was gone from her bulwarks amidships, and the stanchions stood up lonely.

Captain Gale regarded the wild sky dubiously, shook his head, consulted his barometer again and ordered the reefed mainsail lowered.

"I hate like the fence to go in," he said, "but I call'te the Vineyard will be plenty good enough for us tonight."

The mate, with an arm in a sling, agreed promptly.

But as the outer jib was downed off West Chop preparatory to joining the fleet of comfortably anchored shipping in the capacious haven Gale unceremoniously snatched the canvas covered spyglass from the mate and squinted through it up the harbor.

"By the great hook block," he fumed, "if there ain't that slabsided plug of Sponson's in there to an anchor! Where in the name of the gods and little fishes did he drop from? Well, this harbor ain't big enough to hold us both tonight, that's all! We'll run over to Hyannis, and then we'll have a thirty mile start on him when the weather gits straightened out again!"

Of course Gale had no right to risk his owner's property so recklessly, and Sponson, though he owned the White Sea, was hardly within the bounds of common sense in leaving a potential season's catch 500 miles behind and racing madly northward.

It all goes to prove once more John Gay's two-hundred-year-old assertion, "When a lady's in the case you know all other things give place."

The contemptuous eye of Captain Andrew Sponson had seen the maneuvers of the yacht, which he had believed hundreds of miles astern. Though his sails were hardly furled, he got the White Sea under way again and deftly ran out of the crowded harbor under headsails in pursuit of his fleeing rival.

Next morning, if the glass of the marine observer at Highland Light could have bored the thickness of the furious easterly storm which lashed the sands beneath him, it would have revealed the wallowing schooners Daybreak and White Sea, nearly abreast, heading resolutely across Massachusetts bay under balance reefed lower sails.

The marine observer, too, hardened though he was, would have marveled at thought of their night's experience in the wild gale which had raged off Cape Cod since early in the evening before.

The course of each was laid for Eastern Point and Gloucester, sixty miles to the north.

The yacht's spindling topmast had finally succumbed, and the last shreds of a ruined foretopmast flicked straight out from the masthead, but the loss of this top hamper was a blessing rather than anything else.

Gale appeared to realize that his was a losing fight. In such weather the fisherman was at her best, and the battle across the bay would be a long one.

"NO, ANDY, NO—WELL, JUST ONE!"

Storm demons seemed to shriek in the tense rigging. And then, without warning, a screaming squall snapped the White Sea's main sheet. Sponson knew that it should have been replaced long ago, but his schooner was already in debt.

The great boom shot off against the lee rigging like a catapult and buckled at the impact with a terrific crack. The White Sea drove into a trio of small Nugasars as she came to reluctant command, and the crippled mainsail speedily whirled itself into streaming ribbons. A storm trysail was bent on the main gaff, but in a few minutes it went the way of the mainsail.

The skipper bitterly realized that he was out of the race. He was a fool to have expected anything more than the beastly luck which had chased him all the spring. Perhaps he was even ready to believe what Gale had said of Jennie. At any rate, he led a mad attack on the snarl of thrashing spar and tortured canvas and as promptly staggered back and collapsed unconscious on the flooded deck.

Blood oozed from his thick, dark hair and stained the bronze of his square cut face as they carried him to his bunk.

"The White Sea's luck," said the crew resignedly.

Then Big Len Gunnell, the seine heaver, took charge. The wreckage died up beyond further mischief, the plunging White Sea, her bravado suddenly wilted, was put broad off before the gale.

To windward the Daybreak, ignorant of a possible tragedy and gathering new hope from the fisherman's misfortune, dipped the rigged yacht ensign at her main peak in heartless adieu and went on.

Around the knuckle of Cape Cod foamed the fisherman, and after a long beat under foresail and jib she thankfully let go both anchors in Provincetown harbor.

A doctor was bouted aboard immediately. Back with him came Big Len, bearing a crumpled Gloucester paper which told joyfully that the missing mackerel had "struck" again in great quantities off the coast of Nova Scotia.

The crew started a cheer, which was promptly squelched.

"Now, shut right up, every mother's son of ye!" ordered Big Len. "Skipper ain't in no condition to listen to no sech kl-yin! The galoot who lets another yip out of him goes over the rail, feet, head and stummick! Un-stand?"

The crew did.

Early next morning a small boat, with a comely middle aged woman and a fluffy haired, brown eyed girl, came alongside, the latter feathering her oars with the touch of a man-of-war's man and making her landing undismayed by an admiring crew.

"Darnation!" grumbled Big Len. "Ain't I got enough on to my mind already? Here's the Widder Hilbert from home and that pretty young one of hern chock on top of us! And women folks aboard a vessel is jest plain nuisance!"

He tried to entice the cook aft to do the honors, but the cook knew a thing or two and made himself scarce. So it was the perspiring seine heaver who took their painter and meekly ushered them below, repeatedly assuring them in answer to frantic inquiries that the skipper merely "had the bark rubbed off."

"My land, Andy Sponson," began the relieved Mrs. Hilbert, restored to her housewifely self with a jump at the good news, "why don't you tidy things up a little bit?"

"Why, Mother Hilbert, aren't you ashamed?" expostulated the girl, who, with eyes shining, was on her knees at the edge of Sponson's bunk. "If you aren't nice I'll tell Andy all about you and Captain Gale! No, Andy, your temper will go up! No—well, just one!"

Big Len Gunnell, the seine heaver, backed out of the cabin and went on deck, where he took long, deep breaths of the bracing salt air.

Travel Sketch.

By BRADFORD HAWES.

Behind the squaw's light birch canoe,
The steamer rocks and raves;
And city lots are staked for sale

I hear the tread of pioneers
Of nations yet to be—
The first low wash of waves where soon
Shall roll a human sea.

The rudiments of Empire here
Are plastic yet and warm;
The chaos of a mighty world
Is rounding into form.

About 50 years ago the above lines were written by the Poet Whittier. Could the poet have been living in 1915 and crossed the continent, as thousands did, in a comfortable pullman car through thousands of acres of fertile farms, by prosperous cities and thriving mining communities and have visited the great International Exposition at San Francisco, he might well have thought that the realization of his dream was being fulfilled more rapidly than he could have thought possible when the lines were written. The "tread of the pioneer" has long since given way to the thunder of the iron horse, drawing twelve or fourteen well appointed passenger coaches. Today it is not much of an exaggeration to say, that there is no section of our broad land but what can be reached by the iron rail.

Since writing my last letter, I have been wondering what it would be possible to say that would convey to any one not privileged to visit the exposition anything like an adequate conception of what it was like, in the time at my disposal for the purpose and in the space which you can devote to such a letter. I can, of course, only touch in a general way upon some of the main features and if the reader can, by the exercise of his imagination fill in the picture enough to make it of interest, the credit must be to him as much as myself.

The idea of a city, which for eight years had devoted its wealth and energy to rebuilding itself after a destructive earthquake and fire, undertaking to inaugurate and carry through an International Exposition on the scale on which this was conceived, seemed at first little less than audacious. However, when at a mass meeting held April 28, 1910, the amount of $4,098,000 was subscribed in two hours the success of the enterprise was considered assured. This large amount was supplemented at a later meeting by a further popular subscription of $2,500,000. From that time on the enterprise grew rapidly, and when the buildings were ready to receive exhibits it represented an outlay of $50,000,000. The grounds cover a length of two and one half miles along the southern shore of San Francisco Bay, just inside the Golden Gate, and are flanked by Fort Mason on the east and the Presidio grounds on the west. The grounds vary in width from a third to a half mile and cover an area of six hundred and thirty-five acres.

At the beginning of the work much of the site was low wet land and a part of it was under water. This low part was raised by dredging sand and sediment from the bay to the amount of 1,700,000 cubic yards. The eighty acres devoted to gardens and lawns were covered with 50,000 cubic yards of loam and 16,000 cubic yards of fertilizer. These statistics may not be of much popular interest, but they give an idea of the immensity of the undertaking and the amount of work necessary before ground was broken for the first building, January 1913. I have a railroad folder which shows a very good panoramic view of the exposition buildings, about thirteen inches by two, taken apparently from the heights which rise several hundred feet inland from the grounds. Several of the streets which run up the heights are so steep as to be impracticable for traffic and the grass grows between the paving stones.

I suppose most of the readers of this letter are familiar with the geography of the north part of Weymouth. Perhaps I can convey an approximate idea of the general lay of the Exposition grounds by asking you to imagine a comparatively straight coast line from the Hingham bridge to the Quincy bridge, with a strip of comparatively level land extending back half a mile from the waters of the bay. If you will further imagine King Oak Hill very much enlarged, with a view from its top down to the shore, it will convey a fairly good idea of what I have endeavored to describe above.

The easterly, or what we will call the Hingham end is occupied by the "Zone" or amusement concession section. On the other extremity, which for convenience we will call Quincy end, is a mile race course, enclosing ball, aviation and polo grounds. Adjoining the latter are the great stables for horses and cattle, and next easterly from these, the section occupied by the buildings of the states and of foreign governments. Between the latter section and the "Zone" which, as I said, is on the easterly end, are the exhibition palaces, the hospital and several smaller buildings, with the great tower of jewels located centrally of the group. The tower is the most conspicuous feature of the exposition picture. Its base is one hundred and twenty feet square and its height four hundred and twenty feet. It rises in successive stages or tiers, each ornamented and supported by columns and at the top are four sculptured Atlases of colossal size, supporting a sphere seventeen feet in diameter. The tower is pierced by an archway one hundred and twenty feet in height and sixty feet in width. In the construction of this tower fourteen hundred tons of steel and more than a million feet of lumber were used, to say nothing of the covering material.

Flanking this majestic tower on either hand are the eleven exhibition palaces each of which covers an area of several acres and varying in cost from $100,000 to $600,000. This section is called the walled city. This does not imply that it is surrounded by a wall of stone or cement. The name is applied from the fact, that a great green wall of growing ice plant extends for eleven hundred and fifty feet along Chestnut street, forming the southern boundary of this section. The wall is twenty feet high with arches thirty feet high over the main entrance.

The plants are set in shallow boxes of earth, fastened in a wooden frame work which the plants in their growth entirely cover, giving the effect of a solid wall of foliage. This is considered one of the most unique and distinctive features of the exposition landscape engineering.

Each of the exhibition palaces has a domed top, finished in a Nile green color. The prevailing color of the plaster walls is a cream, or old ivory, the whole color scheme is admirably adapted to harmonize and to avoid glaring effects. Between the buildings are courts of ample size ornamented with fountains, sculptuary and shrubbery. Hundreds of trees and palms, many of which are from forty to fifty feet in height, and all transplanted since January 1912, are distributed through the grounds.

RECORD OF THE PAST.

No Stronger Evidence Can Be Had in Weymouth.

Look well to their record. What they have done many times in years gone by is the best guarantee of future results. Anyone with a bad back; any reader suffering from urinary troubles, from kidney ills, should find comforting words in the following statement.

John J. Higgins, 18 Canterbury Street, East Weymouth, says: "Exposure and all kinds of weather tended to bring on trouble with my kidneys. My back got so bad that some days I couldn't sit or straighten. Severe headaches and dizzy spells caused me much suffering and often I felt weak and tired all over. Sometimes I was confined to my bed for weeks at a time. The kidney secretions caused me great annoyance, passing too frequently at night. They were highly colored, painful and contained sediment. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me so much benefit from the start that I kept on taking them and soon improved greatly." (Statement given May 25, 1915.)

PRaises DOAN'S AGAIN.

On April 3, 1916 Mr. Higgins said: "I am glad to again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. I keep them in my home at all times to use in case of necessity."

The Treadmill.

The treadmill was invented thousands of years ago by the Chinese to raise water for the irrigation of the fields. The invention, somewhat changed, was introduced into England and other European countries and used in prisons as a mode of punishment. One was erected at Brixton jail in 1817 and soon afterward in other prisons. Toward the end of the century, however, it fell into disuse.

Impertinent.

TAUGHT THEM A LESSON.

The Czar's Rebuke to the Officers of One of His Regiments.

The czar is greatly loved by his own soldiers, and no wonder, for the following story is typical of him:

A certain Russian lieutenant who was none too well off was one day seen riding in a tram. The other officers of his regiment were furious at what they called an insult to the uniform, and they told the lieutenant that he must send in his papers. The unfortunate young officer had no alternative, but before he could do so the czar heard of the affair. Immediately putting on his colonel's uniform of the regiment in question, his majesty left the palace, hailed a passing tram and, entering it, sat calmly down until it stopped in front of the barracks.

There he got out and, assembling all the officers, said to them: "Gentlemen, I have just ridden from the palace in a tram, and I desire to know if you wish me to send in my papers. I presume I have disgraced my uniform."

Naturally the officers were dumfounded.

"Sire," stammered the major nervously, "you could never do that."

"Then," answered the czar, smiling, "as I have not degraded the uniform Lieutenant— cannot have done so and will thus retain his commission in this regiment even if he, like me, dares to ride in a tram."

After that snubbery died a speedy death in that particular regiment.—Pearson's.

TRY IT ON THE DISK.

A Test That Proves the Human Skull a Good Sounding Box.

An interesting experiment that proves what a good sounding box the human skull is can be performed by any one who has a disk phonograph, says Electrical Engineering.

Stop up both of your ears with cotton as tightly as possible, so that no sound will be heard from the outside. Now place an ordinary darning needle between your teeth by biting on it hard, taking care that the tongue or lips do not touch the needle. The latter is important, because if either lip or tongue touches the needle the sound will be decreased considerably.

For the best results the needle itself should project not more than one or one and a half inches from the mouth. For that reason the darning needle should be broken off about one and one-half inches from its sharp point. It goes without saying that the sharp point should project out of the mouth, while the broken off end should be inside the mouth.

Now start an ordinary disk phonograph and carefully press down upon the record with the needle's point held at the same angle as the reproducer's needle is held ordinarily. As soon as the needle touches the record with sufficient pressure the inside of the head will be filled immediately with music exceedingly loud and clear.

Brignoli in a Temper.

On one occasion Bianchi, the noted teacher, went on the stage to see Brignoli, the famous singer, whom he found pacing up and down like a mad man, humming over his part.

"Why, Brig, what is the matter with you? Are you nervous?" he asked.

"Yes, I am nervous," was the reply as he walked harder and faster than ever.

"But, Brig, you ought not to be nervous. I've heard you sing the part 200 times. I heard you sing it thirty years ago."

"Thirty years ago! Who are you that should know so much?"

"Who am I? You know who I am, and I know who you are."

"Very well, you know what I am, but I am sure you do not know what you are, and if you wish I will tell you. You are a fool!"

Alexander in Mesopotamia.

The marshes of Mesopotamia were famous in the time of Alexander the Great. One of the last acts of his life, within a few weeks of his death, was a voyage down the Euphrates to the great dike of Pallakopas, about ninety miles below Babylon. This sluice has been constructed by the ancient Assyrian kings to let off the water of the river when it became excessive into the marshes. It was reported not to be working well, and Alexander proposed to construct another sluice lower down. He sailed on into the marshes, steering his vessel himself, with his diadem on his head, to explore them and the tombs of the kings, and so extensive were the lakes and swamps that Alexander's fleet lost its way among them.

Weather Variety.

Some growl perpetually at the weather; it is too hot or too cold; too wet or too dry. And yet a kind Providence arranges it infinitely better than we could. What a beautiful promise this was in the early history of the race: "While the earth remaineth, seed time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease."—Christian Herald.

Looking Ahead.

"I think I had better get a job before we marry." "Don't be so unromantic, Freddy. I won't need any clothes for a long, long time." "But you may want to eat almost any time, my dear."—Pittsburgh Post.

Knocking on Wood.

The "knock wood" superstition is said to date back to the days of sylvan gods, when oak, ash and rowan were sacred trees, whose deities would come to the assistance of the knocker.

Electric Light.

The basic discovery of the possibility of electric light was made by Sir Humphrey Davy in 1810, but for the next 50 years the developments were solely scientific and no practical use was made of them. In 1862, however, an arc light was installed in a lighthouse at Dungeness, and this is generally believed to be the first electric lamp in regular service.

HOLD ANNUAL COUNTRY FAIR.

Large Crowd Attends Outing at Crag Cliff Last Saturday Afternoon and Evening.

With weather conditions almost perfect and with a glorious moon, the annual Grand country fair, under the auspices of the Parish of the Trinity Church of Weymouth, was given last Saturday afternoon and evening on the grounds of Crag Cliff, the residence of Rev. William Hyde, Commercial street, Weymouth Heights.

At two o'clock a baseball game was held between the "Indians" of Weymouth Landing and the "Tigers" of Weymouth Heights. The game was a very exciting one, being called with the score a tie 3 to 3.

All during the afternoon an excellent entertainment was given, as well as in the evening, consisting of costume dancing and singing by Miss Madeline Lee, Harry Lee and Miss Isabelle Butler, Miss Dorothy Reade of Winthrop, who presided at the piano being the teacher of these artists. Also pleasing tenor solos were rendered by William Lavery.

At supper time a most appetizing outdoor cafe lunch was served by an able committee made up of Mrs. Charles Belting, Mrs. Tom Lilley, Mrs. Pray, Mrs. Northrup, Miss Irene Lilley and Miss Elizabeth Hyde.

At 7.15 o'clock the grounds were brilliantly lighted with colored lights and the evening's festivities began.

An important feature of the event was the "midway" where was found many attractions including Japanese rolling balls, in charge of Miss Agnes Hyde and William Adam, "ring the canes" managed by Douglas Cain and Charles Cain, and a fortune teller's booth presided over by an attractive young fortune teller.

A sale of fancy and useful articles was carried on by the Sunshine Sewing Circle and their table was well patronized.

The refreshment booth was in charge of Joseph Forsyth, Thomas Mallen, Joseph McMillan, Herbert Pray and John Sutton.

The bundle table was under the direction of the Misses Nellie Cain, Cissy Hemingway, Irene Lilley, Margaret Ramsey and Jennie Morley, Mrs. Joseph Forsyth and Mrs. William Adams sold candy, while Miss Nellie Chase conducted the pop corn booth.

A splendid program of races and sports was held under the supervision of Joseph Forsyth. A dance board was well patronized with Hatten's orchestra furnishing music.

The ticket and tag committee, Stuart Hobart, chairman, report that according to the tickets sold, there were about 400 people at the big event which proves the event was a grand success financially and socially.

Well Attended Lawn Party.

Under the auspices of the Sunday School and the Christian Endeavor Society connected with the Pilgrim Church of North Weymouth, a well attended lawn party was held on Wednesday evening, at the church grounds.

Situated about the grounds were several sales tables and booths in charge of the following: Christian Endeavor Society, Miss Lucy Dyer and Miss Lillian Trussel, chairman; cake table, Sunday school, Miss Lillian Curtis and Miss Nason, chairman; electric corn popping machine, Harry E. Gould, George and Kenneth Gould; white elephant table, Mrs. Henry Dyer and Mrs. William Seaberry; fancy work booth, Mrs. E. F. Beals, Mrs. Horace Walker and Mrs. Sidney Dunbar. The supper department was in charge of Mrs. E. F. Beals, Mrs. A. J. Sidelinger, Mrs. W. O. Collier and Mrs. Henry Farrington of the Ladies Social Circle. A clam chowder supper was served. William Tyler and Murray Parker dispensed ice cream and watermelon.

A. L. Rousseau provided a fine outdoor moving picture entertainment, and cornet solos by Miss Theodora Keith were greatly enjoyed.

A Joke.

He—"I'm thinking seriously of getting married." She—"I've often thought about it, but not as anything serious."

Told the Truth.

"Your advertisement distinctly stated, 'there are no mosquitoes here,'" said the disappointed guest. "I told the truth in that advertisement," answered the proprietor of Pine Ridge inn. "Why, the idea! They are swarming about us right now." "I wrote it last winter."

TOWN BUSINESS.

Selectmen's Business and Other Departments of Work and Expenditures.

At the meeting of the Selectmen on Monday the following business was transacted:

Voted to give a license to Magistrate Houston Co. of Boston to hold a picnic at New Downers Landing on Saturday, July 22.

Appointed a meeting with H. Wilbur Dyer for Tuesday afternoon, July 10, to determine the method of conducting the street drainage from Main street upon his land under terms of easement held by the town.

Voted to request the Highway Commission to remedy the faulty condition in front of the property of Walter W. Pratt occasioned by the sand filling used in the construction of the state highway on Washington street.

Chief of Police Arthur H. Pratt was granted a two weeks' vacation commencing Tuesday, July 18.

Two permits to dig clams for sale were given, one to Joseph Coleran and one to Michael Chitti.

Inspector Thomas Fitzgerald will be acting Chief of Police during the vacation of Chief Pratt.

At the special Tuesday evening meeting of the Board of Fire Engineers, much routine business was transacted. During the meeting the lost child call came, but with the use of the telephone the engineers were kept in touch with the situation. Joseph Sewell was appointed a substitute fire truck driver, his duties to begin when the new Ward 3 truck arrives.

RECEIVES APPOINTMENT.

Charles A. Tobin Succeeds Late B. F. Thomas as Superintendent at North Weymouth Post Office.

The many friends in East Weymouth, North Weymouth and other sections in this locality of Charlie A. Tobin, an East Weymouth boy, will be pleased to learn that Mr. Tobin has been appointed as superintendent of the North Weymouth post office, succeeding the late B. Frank Thomas.

Mr. Tobin is fully qualified for the position, having served several years as clerk in Boston offices, and has kept in touch with office affairs since coming to Weymouth to work.

FUNERAL OF MRS. SIMEON BEARCE.

East Weymouth Lifelong Resident Laid at Rest.

The funeral service of Mrs. Mary J. Bearce widow of Simeon Bearce, took place last Saturday afternoon at her late home on Broad street, East Weymouth. Rev. William M. Newton, pastor of the East Weymouth M. E. church officiated. Miss Bessie Bates sang "Jesus Lover of My Soul" and "Shall We Meet Beyond the River."

The bearers were Frank L. Bearce, George H. Bearce, Ralph Houghton and Harry E. Bearce.

Burial was in the Fairmount cemetery at East Weymouth.

Worse Luck!

Men who are too lazy to work and too proud to beg are usually too indifferent to die.—Judge.

For Practical Purposes.

"So you prefer a political boss in charge of municipal affairs to city commissioners?" "Yes," replied the old-fashioned politician. "It stands to reason that it is much easier to bring one man around to your way of thinking than it is to convert five or six."

Stuck on the Job.

"The great trouble nowadays," began the curbside philosopher, "is that no man is satisfied with his job." "My job suits me," interrupted the chimney-sweep. "And I'm stuck on mine," yelled the tar-spreader from the adjoining roof. Whereupon the orator turned his theme from economics to preparedness.—Puck.

A Kindly Attitude.

"Have you any objections to me as a son-in-law?" asked the young man. "Yes," replied Mr. Cumrox. "At present you're cheerful and companionable and I like you first rate." "Then why not have me in the family?" "I don't want to take a chance on spoiling you. I don't know how you would turn out after mother and the girls had bossed you around for a few years."—Washington Star.

What's The Matter With Weymouth?

$5.00 For the Best Letter of Criticism and $5.00 More For Best Boosting Letter on Affairs Pertaining to the Town and its Affairs

Can you write a letter? We hear you answer, "Of course you can!" Want to earn five dollars for doing it? Read on then Mr. or Mrs. Reader. The Gazette is starting this week a "Boost, Boom and Criticism" column and it is for you, for all our readers—and we are offering two prizes for the best two letters sent in up to September 1; as follows:

$5 for the best letter showing what you believe Weymouth has most to be proud of to the extent of getting new people as residents, new business, etc.

$5 for the best letter giving a good, just criticism of the affairs of the town, in our several departments, criticism in the manner of suggesting thus helping the voters of this town to see where leaks may occur in the doings of the business carried on by our several town boards and departments.

In your "boost" letters, the sky is the limit—use your imagination—see Weymouth as you think it will be in 1920 or 1925 or 1930. Boom your town—tell your neighbors, your fellow townspeople your ideas of the good points of the town, make it brief, and too the point and send it in—you can't earn $5 much easier.

Each week we will publish as many of the letters, both on the "boost" line and criticizing, as space and time will allow—we intend to use everybody right—so send in your ideas, give others a chance to see why this and that happens in town. However here is a big point—don't fail to sign your epistles—not necessarily for publication unless you so wish, but we must know the writer, as are evidence of good faith in submitting the letter. Don't let this point slip by, as our old and trusty waste basket is still on the job and unsigned communications will find a resting place therein.

Now Mr. Citizen, this is your column—use it—express yourselves, or as the law reads "hold your peace forever." Let's hear your views—the ones you like to tell "Bill," "Joe," or some other of your friends whenever you meet. We know it is hot, but we want this column hotter—full of life, lots of dash—get in line for the "big drive" these next four weeks, send in your letters—Uncle Sam is ready to bring them to us.

The judges of the letters will be selected later. They will be men and women who are in close touch with the "whys and wherefores" of the success or failures of many sections to go forward. All letters judged will be void of the writers' signature, thus assuring a careful award on the merits of the letter alone. The list of judges will probably be of three or five in number and the names will be announced in an early issue.

Boom and boost—everything, everybody that is worthy of a boost; or a boom—criticise, suggest, help make affairs in your town better in every department, for every official. Believing there are many in town who can help make many of our town departments and our officials more efficient by just criticism or by a boost or a suggestion, the Gazette will give five dollars as stated above as a prize for the best letter received up to September 1, suggesting good, sound remedies to questionable benefits in any town department, or justly criticising any department or board in their work. Do you know of any work done that should be commented on? Have you seen some detail of town work that needs attention? Is our Fire department, our Police department, our Water department, our Selectmen's work, our Assessor's work, our School department, etc. up to your standard of efficiency?

Tell us about it—send us in a letter giving your suggestions, your criticisms. All of our town officials believe in good just criticism—let's help them give better service by pointing out in the right sort of way, the ideas of the tax-payers of the town. Wake up—quit talking on the street corner and give your views to the town, your ideas, your neighbors ideas, they are all worthy of consideration, send in your criticism, put some "pep" in it. Tell us what you think, politics, town affairs, railroad matters, post office service, everything pertaining to the town but remember—all letters must be accompanied by the signature of the writer, not for publication unless the writer so desires, but as an evidence of good faith on the part of the writer. We reserve the right to reject the publication of any letters showing personal animosity toward any man etc., but we will consider all letters sent in—so open up—send in your views, this is to be your column, we want lots of "drive" to it, show your metal—get your thinking apparatus going and help your town. Get busy, our address is Commercial street, Weymouth, we are looking for your opinion. Here's a few we got this week, after the "column" became known around a bit. Send in yours!

To the Editor of the Gazette:— Why is it, may we ask, that most of our main streets have been oiled on Friday or Saturday;—so that motorists could carry most of the oil off on their tires and cars on Saturday afternoon and Sunday? Just how many streets were thus oiled in town this year, we don't know, we know of some, but it seems as if earlier in the week would be a better time to oil the main streets, thus letting the oil get "settled" by the time the heavy traffic comes on Saturday and Sunday! "Two Broad Streeters."

To the Editor of the Gazette:—

A North Weymouthite says: It takes just about twenty-four hours to get a letter from our part of Weymouth to another. Can you beat it?

Mr. Editor:—

Our river which has its beautiful points also has its weak points. For several years now its waters have been polluted by an oily scum and it seems to increase each year. The bathers complain of it, the yachtsmen also. A. W. Finlay's beautiful 30 ft. "Bar Harbor" which graced our bay last year, graces it no more on account of the grease and grime that gathers on the water line. The receding tide leaves quantities of this grease on the flats for the clams to feed on. So that explains why the clams dug on certain shores are not what they used to be. People blame the Fore River shipyard for this state of affairs but other people say that we lead it to a certain extent before the ship yard came here—that it comes down from the Landing. It seems as though some other way might be found to dispose of dirt and grease than to empty it into our waters. "NORTH WEYMOUTHITE"

"When Dusk Draws Near."

When the landscape has turned to gray and dark green, and the tints of the sunset have darkened, and the road ahead loses itself in shadows, and you swing your motor car around a sharp turn, and there, a silver splotch, lies the lake and its hostelry where you plan to spend the night, that is the end of a perfect motoring day—the restful end which rounds the full happiness of your vacation.

There is no vacation to compare with the outing spent on the road with your automobile. Such is the sermon of the great vacation motoring movement, National Touring Week, which on August 6 will send forth a legion of motorists from the cities and hamlets of the nation. From the Atlantic to the Pacific shore they will set forth, each to discover and enjoy the scenic beauty of the cyclorama bounded by his own horizon.

"See America first by seeing your own state first" is the sentiment being spread broadcast by those who advocate a National Touring Week. One does not need to journey a thousand miles from home to begin a tour of scenic beauty, undreamed of by the average citizen of a state. There is not a commonwealth in our nation that does not offer its citizens a vacation motoring tour rich with scenic beauty. The motorist who does not use his automobile to speed the enjoyment of his vacation neglects his opportunity, scenic beauty and novelty.

CUSTODIAN AT PLYMOUTH.

Major William L. Swan of South Weymouth to Have Charge in Absence of Plymouth Captain.

Major William L. Swan (retired) of South Weymouth has been appointed custodian of the Plymouth armory during the absence of Capt. Robbins. His duties are to visit the building once each week and see that it is not allowed to go uncared for, and have general oversight over any needed repairs. Major Swan has seen 22 years' service all but 6 months, in the M. V. M. During the Spanish war he was 1st Lieut. of Co. L, 1st Mass. heavy artillery, U. S. V. He enlisted in Co. H, 1st Infantry, M. V. M. (Chelsea), Jan. 18th, 1898, and served as private, corporal and sergeant until Mar. 9th, 1894, when he was elected 2d Lieut. of Co. L, (East Boston) of the same regiment. A year later, he went up to the 1st Lieutenancy and served in that office, including the time in the U. S. service, until April 10th, 1899, when he resigned. Two months later, he enlisted as a private in Troop D, 1st Cavalry (Roxbury Horse Guards), and again climbed up out of the ranks through the grades of corporal and sergeant (this time on horseback) to the 2d Lieutenancy of the troop March 15, 1905, and 1st Lieut. Jan. 21st, 1908. When the Cambridge Troop was added to the cavalry force of the State, he was elected its captain, his commission being dated March 1, 1910. Three years later he applied for retirement, which was granted with the advancement to the rank of Major. His home is on Pond street, South Weymouth, where he is active in the affairs of his particular section and of the town. He is ex-president of the Pond Plain Improvement Association, a member of the appropriation committee and of the republican town committee.

OFF FOR THE BORDER.

North Weymouth Man Leaves With Company A., 8th Regiment.

Roscoe Johnson of North Weymouth, until Wednesday with Company K of the 5th Regiment received notice Wednesday of his transfer to Company A of the 8th regiment and orders for his immediate departure for the border. He left Thursday for the company headquarters at Cambridge from which he will leave for Texas. Mr. Johnson has served one year and a half with the 5th regiment and will finish his three year term with the eighth.

Mr. Johnson is a member of Clan MacGregor O. S. C. of Quincy, the Clan MacGregor Bicycle Club and is employed by the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation where his pay will continue as long as he is at the border in accordance with the recent announcement made by the Company that all employees in the militia will remain on the payrolls and will be re-instated on their return. Mr. Johnson's father served in the Civil war and the vein of patriotism runs through the family.

Fore River Club Field Day.

On Saturday July 29th, the Fore River club, representing the 5000 employees of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation of Quincy are to have their annual Field Day. It will be the first all-day field gathering on the new Athletic ground of the corporation recently completed at Quincy Point.

The events comprise every known form of out-door enjoyment.

Butcher Boy in Line This Summer.

The Butcher Boy of Braintree has been overhauled and a company formed to put this old time hand engine on the map this summer and fall. Why can't we have a good company in East Weymouth for the defender and show the Hancock's, Hingham Vets and the others a few wrinkles in the sport of "shooting" water.

Important Scientific Feat.

A process invented by an Italian chemist for extracting essential oils from citrus fruits is said not to affect the chemical properties of the oils in any way, and it is predicted that it eventually will revolutionize the industry.

BOOST WEBB PARK.

Town Park Commissioners Working to Develop Plot in Ward 3. Band Concerts Scheduled for Sunday Afternoons. Children Catered to in Park Construction.

"Band concert at Webb Park Sunday afternoon from 3 until 5 o'clock." Sounds rather modern. Well the Park Commissioners are doing their best to help make Weymouth an attractive place to live in by giving its citizens an ideal spot for rest and recreation—swings and teeter boards for the children, horizontal and parallel bars for those who care to use them and a base ball diamond.

A substantial band stand has been built and with several bands in the town there is no reason why band concerts should not be had as often as desired.

The commissioners' intention to have a band concert each Sunday afternoon during the summer months is still good. Unavoidable circumstances caused the loss of these concerts the past two Sundays and the disappointment to many of our citizens who visited the Park in anticipation of listening to the music was as much of a disappointment to the commissioners. The concert to be given next Sunday will be by the Stetson Shoe Band and the expense of the same will be paid through a collection which will be taken up by the "Webb Park Girls." If the collection is enough to cover the expense the above mentioned band will no doubt be glad to continue to furnish concerts each Sunday.

We know of no better thing to do than to help boom Webb Park. The Park Commissioners serve in their capacity without pay, they serve to do their mite towards keeping Weymouth to the front by building up her parks and playgrounds. Let's make use of what we have and through our boosting help make our pleasure spots even better. We are nearly 300 years old, let's prove that we are 300 years advanced. Are you with us?

NEW TRACK RECORD.

Old Colony Driving Club Matinee Last Saturday Develops Several Feature Events.

At the Matinee meeting of the Old Colony Driving Club at South Weymouth last Saturday, a new track record for matinee racing was hung up, when Mr. Titer drove R. D. Stetson's brown gelding Barney Gibbs, in 2:16 1-2. The former record was held by True Sall with a mark of 2:17.

Blue ribbon winners last Saturday were Barney Gibbs, Prince Lot, Cochato Chief Trixie S., Pansy Blossom, Jefferson McKerron, Betty Todd and Katina's Comet. The track was in fine shape and fast racing was in order.

Postal Savings

Deposits in the United States Postal Saving System continue to show remarkable gains and to demonstrate forcibly that this service is one for which there is very large and widespread demand.

The net gain in deposits or the month of May 1916, was nearly $2,000,000 showing an increase of more than 100 per cent as compared with May, 1915. Postal savings service is rendered now by 7,792 post offices, having 600,000 depositors with $82,500,000 standing to their credit. Two-thirds of all deposits are held by 72 post offices each of which has more than $100,000 on deposit. Seven cities have passed the million-dollar mark—New York, Chicago, Boston, Detroit, Pittsburgh, San Francisco and Portland, Oregon; about 42 per cent of all deposits are held by the post offices in these cities.

Postmaster Murray has in his custody more than $2,000,000 representing the savings of about 18,000 persons. The net gain in deposits during the past calendar months showed an increase of 61 per cent over the corresponding month for 1915.

ON THE FARM

Subscribe for this paper. This column alone is worth more than $2.00 a year if you have a garden or keep a horse, cow, pigs or hens.

You can tell a laying hen as far as you can see her. Her comb is always bright and healthy looking.

More diseases in the chick yard can be treated by cleanliness than by medicines, and if proper attention is given to the heat and seeding there will be little need for worryment.

By keeping the farm tools sharp you save horse feed and horse strength. It does better work, more of it in one day and pays a better profit. It saves time, temper and human vitality. A good emery stone will pay for itself in one season.
 Get you one and keep the tools sharp.

The very early potatoes which ripen will keep much better if dug as soon as thoroughly ripe and stored in a cool dark place. If left in the ground rains will start the sprouts and a potato which has so sprouted is about as poor eating as can be imagined.

The best means of cheering up chicks is furnishing them with some garden worms to fight over. If its dry and worms are scarce fresh beef cut in strips will serve the purpose. Sliced onion will do the work if you don't give it to them too often. Anything to make them scrappy.

A spraying with Bordeaux mixture is needed on the apples about the second week of July. This is an important spray for the control of several serious diseases of the apple. If this spraying is neglected the fruit is almost sure to be in a spotted unsalable condition at harvest time this fall.

Farmers should remember when sowing peas, that they must be cut with a mower. Mowing machines run better if the land is smooth. By using a harrow on the land it can be easily put in good condition for the mower. In cutting peas on rough land it is hard on the driver, the mower and the stock.

Buckwheat is a splendid crop to sow for the poultry, if one has a piece of waste ground that is not being used in the fall. Sow it where the hens can get at it, and they will harvest the crop themselves. It costs little to sow buckwheat for the seeds are not very large, and the stalks are so branching they need to be seeded thinly. If you have bees this crop will be of great importance to them in inducing brood rearing in the fall, insuring a good strong colony in the spring.

Here is a formula for a coal oil dip for chickens and animals to rid them of lice and fleas. This formula is for twenty gallons of dip. It is made by dissolving 1 pound of ordinary laundry soap in 1 gallon of soft warm water; then stir into this 4 gallons of coal oil and add enough water to make 20 gallons.

The refrigerator where milk is stored should be cleaned regularly, especial care being given to keeping the drip pipe free and clean. The ice rack also should be cleaned and any place where food is kept or milk stored should be scalded occasionally with sal soda solution. The refrigerator, even though cold, may quickly be contaminated by a few drops of spilled milk, or by small particles of food. No matter how clean the refrigerator, milk should never be kept in an open vessel.
 As milk absorbs odors easily, such food as fish, cabbage or onions should not be kept in proximity to it.

There are many questions about the use of shavings or sawdust in the manure.
 The shavings usually contain an acid which in large quantities has a bad effect upon the soil. Until this acid is neutralized, large quantities of such manure would be likely to injure the soil. After the shavings have been sweetened or neutralized, they would do no more damage than straw or other forms of bedding.
 When the sawdust is freely used to absorb the stable liquids, there will be very little damage from its use, as these liquids are alkaline and will sweeten the shavings.
 Also, when the shavings are left in the manure pile long enough to go through a partial fermentation, there would be no danger.

Strawberry leaf spot, or rust, is a very common disease. A bed entirely free from the trouble is rarely seen. Ordinarily it causes no serious damage, and the average commercial growers pay no attention whatever to it. The best prevention seems to be to spray thoroughly with Bordeaux mixture just before the blossoms open in the spring. After the bed is through bearing in the early summer it is a good plan to mow off all the leaves with a scythe and then burn over the bed lightly when there is a good breeze blowing. In small home patches it may be practical to pick off all the diseased leaves as fast as they appear, and thus prevent further spread.

When a small portion of charcoal is being fattened for market, it increases

Help us to HOLD DOWN— Tire Prices

TIRES, and GASOLINE, "make the Wheels go round!"
 A Car in the Garage COSTS as much as a Car-on-the-Road, but it pays no dividends, on the Investment, so long as it STAYS in the Garage.

The VALUE of the Car,—to its Owner,—narrows down, in the ultimate, to the precise number of Hours he USES that Car, yearly.

If a $2,000 Car be owned for, say, 4 years (then sold for $600.) there has been $1,400 of Car-Value absorbed by the Owner,—equal to, say, $350. per year.

If then, that Car be USED 913 Hours in the year, it would cost him but 38 CENTS per Hour, for Car-Use.

But,—if he used it only HALF that number of Hours, yearly, the Car would cost him 100% MORE for every Hour he used it.

How MUCH he uses it will depend,—to a considerable extent,—upon the PRICE of TIRES and GASOLINE.

This was one of the reasons why we (Jan. 31st, 1915) inaugurated the Goodrich "FAIR-LIST" Propaganda against High-prices, and Padded-Price-Lists, on Tires.

It is a further reason why we NOW keep our own Goodrich Prices DOWN to the very moderate "Fair-List" figures here quoted.

BETTER Fabric Tires are NOT made, and cannot be made,—at ANY price,—than are produced by The B. F. Goodrich Co.

A 15%, to 50%, higher price could well be justified for these same Tires, by fair comparison with other Tires sold at 15% to 50% higher prices.

Will you help your own interests (present and future), by further expanding the Sale of that Tire which demonstrates its Intention, through LOWERING the Cost of its Tires to you, with every INCREASE in its Volume?

Will you thus endorse, and support, the Goodrich Policy which automatically PREVENTS OTHER Makers from forcing UP the Market on Tires?

Compare Goodrich Fair-List prices, here quoted.
 Bear in mind that NO Fabric Tires,—at ANY price,—are "better,"—no House more Fair, and LIBERAL, on proper Adjustments.

THE B. F. GOODRICH CO., Akron, O.

KENNY'S DEBT

Tragic Tale of the Rough Justice of a Mining Camp.

By WALTER DUNCAN

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

The theory of Kenny's defense was that Bliek was first to draw. Clearly no one believed it—not one of those silent, rugged men who formed a semicircle in front of Frisco's saloon. Against Kenny's word was his reputation—in the mining camp he was known for a bad man, quick on the draw and quicker on the trigger—and there had been bad blood between the dead man and him who now stood in the center of the semicircle.

If in those days the laws of that out of the way place, such as were defined, were administered summarily with little dignity and less ceremony justice was the quicker for it. Seldom was its aim at fault, and it seldom if ever hung fire.

Bliek's stiffening form, lying face downward on the hillside where it had dropped when Kenny's gun had spat, had been exposed to the sun less than an hour before Kenny was called upon by the vigilance committee to explain. He and Bliek had ridden into the hills together. Kenny had returned home alone.

They found Kenny down at Frisco's. Boldly and with a show of unconcern he began his version, while the men of the V. C. closed in and formed the semicircle around him.

Big and forbidding, Bill John Mickle stood in the doorway, cutting off the one avenue of retreat. Bill John had presided as master of ceremonies on more than one previous occasion of this kind.

"He tried to kill me," Kenny told them. "I had to kill him."

But, looking from one rugged face into another and reading their silent verdict, the accused lost his self confidence, and in the desperation with which a stag held at bay fights for life Kenny strove to convince the silent, unbelieving men of the truth of his words.

There was no one to champion his cause. The men of the V. C. did things at first hand—every man to his own defense. Determined to maintain at least a semblance of law and order, they had found it necessary to take the law into their own hands, sometimes to sacrifice human life to make human life the more secure. They did it unflinchingly.

Kenny had had his warning. A week ago he had seen these men form a semicircle and pass judgment on Sam Carter, whose gun had barked when some one here at Frisco's plucked a fifth ace from the gambler's sleeve. Before his man was cold Carter's legs were dangling three feet from the ground and his body swayed from a taut hemp rope.

So Kenny, remembering Sam Carter's fate and searching the grim faces that waited him in for the encouragement he did not find, trembled.

"He tried to kill me," he repeated slowly.

Silently one after another slowly shook their heads. They knew Bliek for a man of peace. And they knew Kenny. His record nullified his words.

"I WAS HIDING ON THE UPPER TRAIL, AND I SAW IT. HE KILLED HIM IN SELF DEFENSE."

If it were not for the one thing, thought Kenny, he could make them believe. That he and the man he had killed had been bitter rivals until Frisco's daughter Katie had given her heart to Bliek completed his condemnation, and the silent, rugged men would not believe.

Slowly, one after another, they shook their heads.

"Say your prayers, Kenny."

Bill John Mickle from his stand in the doorway pronounced judgment on the culprit.

"And may God have mercy on your soul!" he added. Somewhere back in civilization he had heard that.

The condemned man did not pray.

Despairing, he saw the semicircle broken where a man from whose arm hung a coiled hemp rope stepped out of his place and advanced quickly toward him.

Kenny's fingers itched for the feel of his gun. In another moment the noose was slipped over his head and drawn so tight it pained him where the big, rough knot pressed hard against his neck.

"Say your prayers, Kenny," Bill John repeated. "It's your last chance to say them."

Kenny looked dazedly about him. He was not looking for hope. Of hope he knew there was none. Fear, to which he had been a stranger, chilled the blood in his veins. Still he did not pray. To Bill John Mickle, who still stood in the doorway looking down upon the little tragedy enacted in the little arena as a judge looks down from the bench, the man with the noose about his neck turned an appealing, helpless, whitening face, and his lips moved. But no sound escaped them.

The silence was that of the hills and of death.

It was broken by a footfall inside the saloon, and from behind Bill John appeared a woman, little more than a girl. She was Frisco's daughter Katie, who, attracted by the crowd, had come from the kitchen which was set apart a little way in the rear.

For one second she surveyed the scene through eyes red with weeping; then she stepped into the semicircle of men.

Kenny, the rope about his neck, went whiter at sight of her and trembled, afraid of the woman for love of whom he had gone to his ruin.

But how he had loved her! If he might know that she even now still cared one little bit he could go to his doom and die like a man.

"Time's up," announced Bill John, snapping the case of his watch.

"Wait."

Something in the girl's voice as she spoke—something Kenny least of all had expected and which he could not define—caused him to lift his head. Would she taunt him for killing her lover, he who had known the way to a woman's heart, now that he was going to his own death?

"He tried to kill me," he pleaded. "I cannot make them believe me, but I had to do it."

"That is what I have come to tell you," answered the girl, addressing the men who formed the semicircle. "I saw it all. I was riding on the upper trail, and I saw it. He killed him in self defense."

Kenny looked at the girl unbelievably. She whose lover he had shot down, whose scorn he had expected, she had come at the crisis to save his neck. They must believe her.

In spite of the hemp rope, he threw back his head and laughed boldly in triumph, for he had cheated the death that a moment before hovered over him, and in life there would now be no handsome, hated Bliek to win away the girl's heart from him.

Bill John Mickle from the doorway was speaking.

"Kenny," he said, "she has saved your worthless life, but you've had a narrow escape. Let this be a lesson to you. We can't hang you now, but this community don't need your kind, and you got to go. Before sundown—understand?"

Unblinking and defiant, the girl who had drawn nearer to the man she had saved, as though to further protect him from the rest, turned upon Bill John.

"If he goes, then I go too," she threatened, knowing full well that every man in camp was dependent upon her, the only woman within forty miles.

Kenny, who was a man of action, lost no time marveling at Katie's unexpected words. He heard, and a proud advantage over these rugged, silent men swelled within him. At the instant he regained all the bold defiance of his nature.

"Let us go," he said to her.

"I am ready."

The men who had formed the semicircle were silent and still no longer. They gathered round Bill John and Frisco and voiced their protest against the girl's going. It was unanimous.

"I guess you can stay, Kenny."

Reversing his former decision with these words, Bill John walked away, and Katie, laughing in the pride of her victory, ran back to her kitchen behind Frisco's saloon. She felt certain that Kenny would come to her there presently.

Three hours later, when the men who had formed the semicircle were back up in the hills and Frisco dozed in a corner of his saloon and the mining camp was lifeless and still, the man sought the woman who had saved his life.

For more than an hour he had been cursing himself for a blind fool while he lay outstretched upon the bunk in his shack at the foot of the hills. Any one else, he told himself, would have known that the girl had loved him all the while and that, like a woman, she had only pretended Bliek had won her away from him.

But, even though she loved him and had loved him while he had not known it, Kenny felt that he owed her a great debt for what she had done. She had saved his life. He owed her that at the very least.

He resolved then that he would devote it to her happiness and thought a little of mending his ways. He would make it all up to her.

At the kitchen he found her. She was wiping the dishes when he came, and, resting his elbows on the rough window sill, he thrust his head and shoulders inside.

"Katie, that was a mighty big thing you done for me today," he said simply.

"And may God have mercy on your soul!" he added. Somewhere back in civilization he had heard that.

The condemned man did not pray.

Despairing, he saw the semicircle broken where a man from whose arm hung a coiled hemp rope stepped out of his place and advanced quickly toward him.

girl looked up, straight into Kenny's hungry eyes, and slowly shook her head.

"No," she said—"no, I don't love you, Kenny. It wasn't that."

The man started, surprised.

"Then, why did you tell 'em that lie?" he demanded of her. "Why didn't you let 'em finish the job?"

"Because," the girl answered him—"because I need you, Kenny; because I want you to help me. Do you love me, Kenny?"

"God, how many times have I told you?" he cried passionately. "I'd give "YOU WILL DO THIS FOR ME—WHAT I ASK?"

you my life, my heart and soul, my name—

"That's what I'm going to ask of you, Kenny," she said. "It's your name I want—just that."

"My name?" he asked, understanding nothing of what she was trying to tell him. "My name? For what?"

"For the child whose father you killed today," she answered bravely, a little quiver in her voice, and hung her head to hide what might be in her face and in her eyes. "Do you understand now?"

Kenny staggered backward as one under the weight of a heavy blow and stared for a moment, unbelieving. Then he said:

"Yes; I understand now."

"We were to be married next Sunday when the parson comes," she added, but Kenny gave no sign that he heard. He had turned his back to the window and was looking far away across the hills.

"You will do this for me—what I ask?" She pressed him for an answer. "I have been honest with you, Kenny. You must remember that. I need not have told you, and I saved your life today."

"You saved my life, yes," he cried, turning quickly upon her, "but you loved him!"

"You will do it, Kenny?" she insisted as he was turning away.

"Tomorrow I will tell you. I don't know," he answered, and without another word he walked away and went to his shack.

Before sundown a man on a horse, with his blankets rolled into a pack behind his saddle and his outfit strapped to his back, rode out of camp and up into the hills.

It was Kenny, and he was going away.

Down in the little kitchen behind Frisco's saloon in the valley a woman, little more than a girl, was weeping bitter tears.

In the Family.

Uncle Henry married my father's cousin. They lived alone in a great house, which had the most dismal library in the whole wide world. It was all black walnut, lined with books with dull leather backs and uninteresting titles. Over the shelves, against a border of black velvet, were rows of marble statues that came from Europe.

There were two invalid chairs with big wheels, although neither Uncle Henry nor Aunt Ella were really invalids, and in one corner of the room was a Swiss music box that played lugubrious airs. Finally Uncle Henry died, and then Aunt Ella, and all the property had to be divided.

Aunt Ella had always worn a large black cameo likeness of Uncle Henry, which had been cut in Rome. It was set as a brooch and was surrounded with rather large sized diamonds and was an object of most sacred veneration to us all. We felt that it should go—as the greatest treasure of all—to the niece with Uncle Henry's name. Can you imagine our feelings when she had it made into a belt buckle?—New York Independent.

Caught it, and it Was Her Own.

Anna Belle Wilson was the proud possessor of a well developed case of whooping cough, and, as she explained it, "it was the first one of the 'catchin' diseases I ever had."

She was just developing a good, healthy whoop when her mother gave her some advice as to the danger of her playmates in catching the disease.

"You must be very careful about playing with other children," her mother said. "When you see them coming to play with you do not lose any time in running from them or they will take it from you."

Imagine Mrs. Wilson's surprise and amusement when Anna Belle catapulted into the front door only a few feet ahead of little Miss Jane Keyes, one of her playmates.

"Mamma! Mamma!" the child screamed. "For mercy sake, shut the door! Jane is after me, and if you don't help she'll take the whooping cough from me! And just think, mamma, it's the only one I ever caught too!"—Indianapolis News.

The Gazette & Transcript is printed and mailed Friday afternoons, and is for sale at all News-stands in the Weymouths and at the South Terminal, Boston.

All communications must be accompanied with the name of the writer, and unpublished communications cannot be returned by mail unless stamps are enclosed.

Notices of all local entertainments to which admission fee is charged must be paid for at regular rates, 10 cents per line in the reading matter, or regular rates in the advertising columns.

The dream of Jules Verne as told many years ago in "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," is coming true. With the arrival of the big German submarine at Baltimore recently, an idea of a Frenchman, developed by an American and later improved by the Germans, has caused fiction to come true, and the end is not yet.

It is most time for Weymouth Fair again. President Burrell and his assistants are all hard at work preparing for the biggest and best fair ever held in town. Boom the Weymouth Fair! It must interest our townspeople—they go and enter their fruits, their fancy work, their handicraft, then they go to see what their neighbors have to offer, the State must approve of agricultural fairs they paid a large bounty to help maintain these fairs—therefore—you should do your share to make the Weymouth Fair a grand success—such events as the Weymouth Fair help to boom the town and you ought to do your share in that also. Wake up—talk Weymouth and the Weymouth Fair. Boom your fair and your town—its worth your while.

The postmaster question at North Weymouth is settled. While we believe Mr. Bailey was the man due for the position on account of his service during Mr. Thomas' last years, this fact does not detract one iota from the fact that Mr. Tobin, the new postmaster, should make a good official. He is alive and as we have learned, much to our satisfaction the past week, that he is fully competent to fill the chair left vacant by the death of the late Mr. Thomas. Mr. Thomas was, all during his many years of faithful, efficient service an able and conscientious official. Mr. Tobin has a big man's shoes to fill—co-operation by his assistants and the townspeople, as well as a liberal use of the gray matter we know Mr. Tobin possesses, should obtain the desired results. We congratulate Mr. Tobin on his appointment.

A report has been current about town the past week that the Weymouth Board of Assessors had announced the tax rate for this year. Without doubt the report started from a story published in several Boston papers last week. These papers stated that the rate was to be the same as last year, then goes on to state that the rate is $18.50. Last year's rate was $19.40 in town. Again the report stated that the valuation of the town was over 9,000,000 whereas the valuation last year in Weymouth was over 12,000,000. Probably the first paper got the report state, but the name of the town wrong. Then other papers "copied" the story and hence the mixup. We know that no action on this matter has been taken yet and any reports to the contrary are unfounded. The Assessors may know about what the rate will be, but no announcements will probably be made for two or three weeks yet.

CHAINED TO A ROCK

How the Turks Once Imprisoned a Greek Battleship.

DARING OF A YOUNG OFFICER.

His Pluck and Strategy Resulted in Making the Powerful Enemy Vessel Lie Helpless Within the Landlocked Waters of the Gulf of Arta.

It was during the war between Greece and Turkey in 1907 that the inhabitants of Gala Krini—a large village, since destroyed by the Turks, on the shores of the gulf of Arta—awoke one morning to find that a Hellenic battleship had entered the gulf and cast anchor off the shore. The surprise of the inhabitants of Gala Krini was nothing compared with that of a party of five Turkish officers, who, from the very crest of a hill towering above the village, watched the vessel through their telescopes.

These Turkish officers were on an urgent and important mission—to block out the Hellenic fleet from the gulf of Arta. Behind them, at the bottom of the deep ravine, were a number of heavy guns which had been dragged all the way from Saloniki, a long and difficult task, and with this artillery they had been ordered to fortify the strait.

To reach the strait, however, the Turkish column had to run the gantlet of the battleship's heavy guns, which meant sheer destruction. Somehow or other they must escape the man-of-war or prevent her interference with their work, but to do this seemed impossible.

In the midst of their discussion a young officer who had been listening said he could hold the vessel a prisoner if they would allow him. His pleading won, and, hurriedly changing his clothes for those of a shepherd, he descended in that disguise to Gala Krini.

Late that night a number of figures stole through the dark alleys of the village toward the shore. Close to the water's edge was an old boathouse, used as a shed for repairing boats. This the party silently entered and by the flickering light of a taper searched the black interior. At length there was a gentle rattle and from the gloom emerged Hassan, stripped to the waist, dragging a heavy chain. This, with the help of his comrades, he began to pull, and after an hour's laborious work the end of the great chain—once the cable of a Turkish vessel—was reached.

From the beach the chain was loaded on board a large calque, whose sides and floor had been covered with cloth to deaden the sound. This task accomplished, three men got in with Hassan and rowed with muffled oars toward a large rock in the middle of the night. Round this rock the chain was laid and securely fastened. One man having been landed on the crag to keep guard over this end, the boat set out cautiously for the battleship, looming like a phantom in the distance. Not a sound did the men make as link by link the massive chain was paid out over the stern into the still water till they reached the vessel.

There was an excited gleam in Hassan's eyes as, with a sign to his comrades, he gradually lowered himself into the dark water, guiding himself by passing his fingers over the battleship's plates. A slight grating of the chain against the hull was all that his anxious companions in the boat heard, though now and then a reassuring pull was felt on the line that Hassan held, directing them how to pay out the chain. Hours rather than minutes seemed to have gone by ere the young officer came to the surface. So exhausted by his long dive was he that he had to be almost lifted into the boat.

"It is round the propeller," he gasped. "I have fixed it so that nothing can move it. Back you go."

Then link by link the tedious work was renewed until the boat returned to its starting point, where the other end of the chain was secured. The risky task was done, and the Hellenic battleship was securely moored to an immovable rock by a double thickness of cable.

The early rays of dawn revealed a sight which astonished the Greek commander. A whole regiment of Turks were on the march toward the strait of Arta, with train after train of artillery, the last of which disappeared beyond the intervening head before the ship's guns could be brought to bear on them. The commander gave orders for the guns to be run out and decks cleared for action, while the anchor was weighed, his intention being to prevent the Turks from fortifying the strait before they had become too strong. "Full speed ahead!" went the order to the engine room, and, propelled by her mighty screw, the battleship advanced, only to lurch backward as if dragged by some unseen force. Work as the engines would, the vessel seemed to be in an enchanted circle, beyond which it was impossible to go.

It was not until the sun's rays had penetrated the deep blue water alongside that the secret was revealed and the massive chain was discovered passing round the ship's propeller and the adjacent rock.

Before it could be removed, however, the strait had been sufficiently fortified by the Turks and a powerful Greek warship lay a helpless prisoner within the landlocked waters of Arta.

—Member the Rube Band at last year's County Fair? They are tuning up like time for July 29th.—Adv't.

—Dr. Lyons and family of Cambridge have moved out to Mrs. Cormack's house on Saunders street for the rest of the summer.

—The gardens about town are looking fine. The wet weather we have had so much of has seemed to do them more good than harm.

—Mrs. Caroline L. Thayer observed her eighty-first birthday anniversary with a family dinner party at the home of her son, James B. French, on Bridge street this week. Relatives were present from Forrest Hills, Lynn, Somerville and East Weymouth. She was well remembered with gifts and postal cards.

—Mrs. J. Fred Miller spent the week end with her mother, Mrs. Elwell in Marshfield.

—Miss Mabel Sampson starts on a two weeks' vacation tomorrow which she will spend with Miss Elizabeth Magay at West Tisbury, Martha's Vineyard. Miss Magay has remodelled an abandoned meeting-house which she purchased, into a summer cottage.

—The program for this week at the North Weymouth Yacht club house was as follows: Tuesday evening, whist party for members, their families and house guests; Wednesday afternoon, ladies' whist; Thursday evening, a smoker, at which Frank Vining Smith of Boston performed with charcoal and paint; Saturday evening the regular dance.

—Nospotykitt cottage at Fort Point is occupied again this season by Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Randall, Leon and Miss Pauline Randall of Wollaston. Mr. and Mrs. Randall are former residents of East Weymouth.

—The Fort Point A. A. is in line with an attractive list of summer events for the 1916 season. Improved facilities for yachting, fishing and bathing along the beach are noticed and good weather helps in making this part of our shore an attractive summering place.

—Miss Olga Bailey spent the week end as a guest of friends in Montserrat.

—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Seabury entertained Mr. and Mrs. Neath and Mrs. Donallon of Lynn on Sunday.

—Mrs. Gardner Alden was hostess for for the Thimble club yesterday afternoon.

—Mr. Devlin and son, Edward are both enjoying vacations.

Travel Sketch.

BY BRADFORD HAWES.

The wonderful effects wrought out in landscape gardening in three years seems little short of miraculous; it could only have been accomplished by the lavish expenditure of money in a country where all seasons lend themselves to work of this character. The architectural effect of the Exposition buildings proper, while varying much in detail is of the same general character. This does not hold true of the buildings of the states and of the foreign nations. These, as would be expected, vary greatly in design and construction; each nation apparently seeking to introduce the characteristic features of its own architecture. Twenty-eight of our states and territories and twenty-two foreign governments are represented by buildings. Few of these made any pretension of providing for exhibits the general management having made ample provision in its several palaces for bringing together the contributions of all nations. Some exceptions to this general rule were noticeable, among which that of Canada is worthy of special mention. The building of "Our Lady of the Snows" was approximately one hundred yards in length and something more than one half of that in width, with a broad aisle passing lengthwise its centre.

One section of this building, of about a hundred feet is of glass construction on the westerly side, and a beautiful piece of perfectly kept lawn as a carpet surprised the visitor on his entrance. At intervals over this emerald carpet were placed large dishes of the various fruits which were then—in the middle of August—ripening in the Dominion. Various exhibits of the products and industries were displayed in the remainder of that side of the building.

Upon the other side of the central aisle, as one entered the building he beheld a primeval Canadian forest, so artistically imitating nature in the foreground and middle distance that one could scarce believe he was not looking into a real forest, as in fact he was as far as the tree trunks were concerned. The background was a panoramic painting, but so cunningly was the work performed that one could hardly tell where the real ended and the painting began. Scattered at intervals through the forest were the game animals, great and small, and the birds of the Canadian wilds. These were mounted in so life-like manner that it was hard to believe they were not alive.

Bison, moose, elk, deer, bears, wolves, wolverines, foxes, coons, all were there, and by a stream of running water a pair of beavers appeared to be industriously at work building their dam. Numbers of the smaller animals were about the ground and in the trees. After proceeding a while we came to a clearing in the forest and a log cabin appears with a little piece of land under cultivation. The settler at this time was probably more hunter than farmer, and lives largely from the game the forest supplied. As we advance the clearings become larger, the house more pretentious, the wild life disappears and in its place comes the cow, the horse, the sheep and pigs and poultry. Then comes the saw-mill, comfortable looking homes with great barns near and in the distance broad fields of waving grain ripening to the harvest. Here we come to the end of the Canadian exhibit. But is it the end? No. Our neighbor in the North-west is a generation behind us in development, but the iron horse is there and Canada is just coming into her own.

The largest of the state buildings is that of California. Here again California has outdone the world. This building is claimed to be the largest ever erected at an exposition by a state or nation, costing with its displays two million dollars. Its architectural designs are borrowed from the old mission buildings. It is situated on the Marino, as the street along the water front is called and is about midway the length of the grounds, within the section occupied by the Exposition Palaces. It contains the administrative headquarters of the Exposition and in its eastern portion five acres of floor space is devoted to the displays of the 58 counties of the state. The Massachusetts building is designed as a reproduction of the original State Capitol on Beacon Hill. No displays are made here. One room on the lower floor is devoted to moving picture exhibitions. At the time of my visit, "Paul Revere's Ride" was on. Several of the building are equipped with excellent moving picture plants, illustrating the life and customs of the different peoples. These are all free to you when you have dropped your half dollar at the gate. From morning until evening you can roam among this vast collection of the finest products of the nations of the earth for the paltry sum of fifty cents.

When I say that the several exhibition buildings have fifty miles of aisles, and seventy thousand separate exhibits, varying from the great Mogue locomotives in the Transportation Palace to the exquisitely wrought silk pictures from the private gallery of the Emperor of Japan in the Fine Arts Palace you will easily believe that it was a physical impossibility to see it all in a brief stay of four days. I think the pictures to which I allude impressed me as being among the most wonderful things which I saw. At a little distance they might be taken for oil paintings, but upon examination it appeared that the work was composed of minute stitches of various colors of silk so cunningly wrought that it was only upon the closest inspection that the stitches could be detected. It was said that one of these pictures of about two by two and a half feet represented years of toil by the artist. None but an oriental, gifted with infinite patience, could produce such results. To have seen the great display of sculptuary and paintings was an event of a lifetime. I make no pretence of being an art critic, but the privilege of having been enabled to see this great collection of works of art by many of the foremost artists of our own and foreign lands, was one I shall long cherish. If I may be permitted here to go from the sublime—not to the ridiculous—but to the extremely practical, I will say that one of the exhibits which seemed all ways to attract an interested group of spectators, was the assembling of Ford cars. It was said that one was being put together every twenty minutes. While this may have been possible it was some exaggeration of the fact as I saw it. The one which I saw go through was in the hands of the workmen a half hour from start to finish. The machine passed through the hands of six groups of mechanics, six machines being all of the time in process of assembling. As I watched the ease and rapidity—yet without apparent haste—with which the cars were turned out, it seemed to me that almost every one who wished should be able to have a Ford. At the inception of the Exposition it was designed to represent the progress of the world during the last decade. The exhibits along the line of human progress were largely for the purpose of illustrating the inventions and improvements which have come into the world the last ten years to make life the better worth living.

I shall, doubtless, be expected to make some mention of the "Zone" as the amusement section is called. This covers seventy acres of land where two hundred concessions were granted, primarily for the amusement of the people, though some of the shows were not without considerable educational value.

One of these places which I visited, was a miniature representation of the Panama Canal. I here use the term "miniature" in a comparative sense; the exhibition occupying an ample theatre about one hundred yards in length by about one half that breadth, constructed to show the whole length of the canal, the railroad and all the physical features of land and water along their course. The land features were moulded in clay, hardened to hold its form and colored to represent as nearly as possible the original, of forest or base mountains.

RAILROAD WAGES

Shall they be determined by Industrial Warfare or Federal Inquiry?

To the American Public:

Do you believe in arbitration or industrial warfare?

The train employees on all the railroads are voting whether they will give their leaders authority to tie up the commerce of the country to enforce their demands for a 100 million dollar wage increase.

The railroads are in the public service—your service. This army of employees is in the public service—your service.

You pay for rail transportation 3 billion dollars a year, and 44 cents out of every dollar from you goes to the employees.

On all the Eastern Railroads in 1915, seventy-five per cent of the train employees earned these wages (lowest, highest, and average of all) as shown by the payrolls—

	Passenger		Freight		Yard
	Range	Average	Range	Average	Range	Average
Engineers	$1641 3224	$1931	$1585 2992	$1783	$1303 2178	$1543
Conductors	1553 3004	1831	1552 2901	1642	1145 1991	1315
Firemen	951 1704	1128	933 1762	1109	752 1633	935
Brakemen	957 1707	1141	862 1521	973	834 1635	1085

The average yearly wage payments to all Eastern train employees (including those who worked only part of the year) as shown by the 1915 payrolls were—

	Passenger	Freight	Yard
Engineers	$1796	$1546	$1384
Conductors	1724	1404	1238
Firemen	1033	903	744
Brakemen	1018	858	990

A 100 million dollar wage increase for men in freight and yard service (less than one-fifth of all employees) is equal to a 5 per cent advance in all freight rates.

The managers of the railroads, as trustees for the public, have no right to place this burden on the cost of transportation to you without a clear mandate from a public tribunal speaking for you.

The railroads have proposed the settlement of this controversy either under the existing national arbitration law, or by reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission. This offer has been refused by the employees' representatives.

Shall a nation-wide strike or an investigation under the Government determine this issue?

JOHN A. RAYMOND, TOWN CLERK

One spring morning while touring in my car I passed a little house standing a short distance back from the road to which was nailed a sign, "Miss Jinks, Domesteopath."

Now, I had often heard of the allopath, hydropath, osteopath and other schools, but never before had I seen the word domesteopath. I drove on, wondering what it meant, my curiosity rising with every mile I receded from it till I could stand it no longer. Then I turned, rode back to the house, left my car in the road and went up to the door. There was no bell, but an old fashioned iron knocker, representing the face of a smiling girl. I rapped.

A lady came to the door who was in appearance as unintelligible as the sign. She might have been fifty, yet she was dressed like a girl of sixteen. While her face and figure smacked of youth, it at the same time smacked of age. I asked if she was Dr. Jinks. She said she was Miss Jinks and invited me into a cozy consulting room.

"What is your specialty?" I asked her.

"Squabbles," she said in a cracked voice as peculiar as her appearance.

"Squabbles? I never heard of that disease."

"It's universal. Every one suffers from it more or less."

"What are the symptoms?"

"It comes largely from overstrained nerves. Sometimes it is reasonable, though usually unreasonable. It is most common between husband and wife, for the reason that a man is a man, while a woman is half child."

"What! You, a woman, make that statement?"

"A man living with a woman," she went on, "is continually in the presence of a being made up entirely different from himself, and vice versa. Therefore they are subject at all times to the disease of which I make a specialty—squabbles."

"Oh, I see! Well, I don't know that my wife and I have any more of that disease than the average couple. At the same time—"

The last four words were enough for Miss Jinks. She told me of difficulties I had with my wife with as much exactness as if she had been a member of my family. They were not serious, but annoying, and sometimes bordered on what might be called quarrelsomeness.

"And you eradicate these difficulties, these squabbles, as you call them?"

"Wherever I can get my patients to take my medicine."

"What is your treatment?"

"That is my secret. If you desire me to treat you and your wife I shall charge you a fee to begin with."

"You would need to call upon my wife," I interrupted, "and I don't see what reason could be offered for doing so."

"Not at all. Your wife will call on me."

"How do you make out that?"

"Give me your address and I will send her my card."

"How would that effect the purpose?"

"What led you to make this visit?"

"Curiosity."

"Will you deny that your wife has less curiosity than you?"

"On the contrary, she has ten times as much as I."

"She need not know you have been here. As I was about to say when you interrupted me, I shall charge you a consulting fee of $5 and will charge your wife a fee of $10."

"Why charge my wife more than me?"

"People only value what costs them something. A woman is always bound to get the full value of her money. If your wife pays a good sum for my advice she will be more apt to follow it. The man is more liable to act upon the value of what he receives as he sees it."

"You surely know your sex."

"We women all know one another."

Before I left Miss Jinks I handed her a five dollar bill and gave her my home address, asking her for the medicine. But she said a prescription would be sent in due time. Squabbles was a plural disease; no one could have it without inoculating some one else. The cure must therefore be plural. I saw the point and submitted to be guided by Miss Jinks' method. I left her trusting that her efforts to cure my wife would be successful. Since all our difficulties were her fault, the treatment would naturally pertain to her. Miss Jinks did not gainsay this; she only smiled a wizened smile.

A few days after this my wife informed me that she was going to make a tour in the car and would be gone all day. Since it was a day's ride to and from the domesteopath's I assumed that she was going there. She returned without saying where she had been, but I noticed that when I found fault with her for concealing her doings she refrained from answering back.

The next morning I received by mail a prescription from Miss Jinks: "Look for the fault within yourself."

To make a long story short, Miss Jinks had given me and my wife the same prescription. It struck us on consideration that the prescription was worth what we paid for it, and I observed the treatment on this account. Julia observed it because she didn't propose "to pay out $10 for nothing."

We have kept up Miss Jinks' treatment from that day to this, and no household is happier.

RIGHT or WRONG NUMBER?

The right way to call a telephone number is to consult the telephone directory, get the correct number, and then call for that number, clearly and distinctly, when the operator answers your signal. If you do not ask for the correct number you will be connected with the wrong number.

Have you ever noticed how the mind plays queer pranks with numbers in transposing figures? It will readily transpose 1468 into 1648, or 6426 into 6246.

If memory only is relied upon, there is always the likelihood of error, and valuable time is lost in correcting such errors.

If an old memorandum containing a number is used, there may have been a change since it was written or printed, therefore the telephone directory should be consulted whenever you wish to talk.

There can be no time saved by guessing—"nears" don't count; every wrong number call is an economic waste to the subscriber as well as to the company.

The wrong way creates annoyance to the person who is called by mistake; the right way saves delay and annoyance in completing your message, and it creates a high grade of service for you and for others.

If you cannot find the number in the telephone directory, ask for the "Information Operator at the desired Central office. Her records are complete and up to the minute; she knows every new subscriber's number, every change of location as well as of number, and will start you right with the desired information.

Union Church Notes.
Morning worship on Sunday at 10.30 o'clock. Sermon subject "The Brook in the Way." Sunday school at 12 o'clock. During the lesson hour a blackboard talk will be given.

The prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening at 7.45 o'clock, subject, "The Slaves of Heedlessness."

Trees on a Boundary.
When trees grow on a boundary line they belong to the owner of the land even though they be only six inches over the line. The fruit on the tree belongs to this owner even though the limbs extend over the other man's land. The owner cannot go on the neighbor's property to pick this fruit without permission, nor can the neighbor legally pick the fruit on the tree.

TOWN BUSINESS.

Selectmen's Business and Other Departments of Work and Expenditures.

The Selectmen met at their office on Monday and transacted considerable important business other than the regular routine work.

An invitation was received from the Fore River Club to attend their first annual field day on their new athletic field at Quincy Point on Saturday, July 29th. The invitation was accepted.

A license was granted to the First Universalist Parish to hold a lawn party on the Weston Estate on Front street, Weymouth on August 2nd or the first pleasant day after.

A permit was granted to Edward J. Jordan to move a barn 30 x 26 from Shaw street to Green street. Franklin Blanchard is the contractor and it was stipulated that no trees are to be trimmed without a permit from the Tree Warden.

A notice was received from the Public Service Commission of a hearing to be held at their offices, 1 Beacon street, Aug. 1, 1916 on petition of the Bay State Street Railway Company for authority to use two-car surface trains in the transportation of baggage, freight, etc., in various cities and towns.

Upon request from the land court, it was ordered that Russell H. Whiting, Town Engineer be requested to define the street lines on the land on Washington, Front and Franklin streets, Weymouth owned by Anne Warren Weston and that Alfred P. Worthen, Town Counsel be requested to represent the town at the hearing.

Mr. Merritt, tree warden, was requested to trim the branches of all shade trees on the sidewalks about town where they were low enough to interfere with pedestrians.

Selectman Hanley and the Supt. of Streets were appointed a committee to select a location for the drinking fountain in Commercial square which is to be moved from its present location in the center of the square to the south side of the square, on the edge of the Washington school yard.

The Chief of Police was instructed to vigorously enforce the law in regard to bicycle riding on the sidewalks.

Arthur L. McGrory was appointed as a special police officer.

President Ralph P. Burrell of the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Society made application for officers to serve on the grounds for the Weymouth Fair. It was voted that a sufficient number be detailed for that purpose.

The Bates Association.

The tenth annual meeting of the Bates Association, incorporated, is to be held Thursday, Aug. 3, at the Alpha hall, Quincy.

In the morning at ten o'clock members will gather at the hall for a tour of places of historic interest, near at hand, including the graves of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams, the Adams house, the Quincy house, the old cemetery, the Quincy historical rooms, etc., and auto trips around the city to points of interest.

Dinner will be served at 12.30 o'clock at Alpha hall.

The afternoon session will convene at 1.30 o'clock at the hall. The usual business will be transacted, consisting of the report of the secretary and treasurer, the election of officers, and any other matters to be presented.

Addresses will be made by Hon. Gustave B. Bates, mayor of Quincy, Rev. E. Victor Bigelow of Andover, Mass., and others. Katharine Lee Bates a poem; Hon. George H. Bates of Barnwell, South Carolina, is coming, and others will be there from far and near.

All persons having a Bates ancestor by birth or marriage are eligible for membership in the association, and all persons who are interested are invited to attend this meeting.

The membership fee is one dollar annually, payable at the time of the annual meeting. Life membership ten dollars.

Officers of the Association are: President—Gardner Bates of Charlestown, Mass.; vice-presidents—Albert C. Bates, Hartford, Conn.; Walter L. Bates, South Weymouth, Mass.; Dr. Everett A. Bates, Springfield, Mass.; secretary and treasurer—Rev. Newton W. Bates, Fairport Harbor, O.

Nothing the Matter With Weymouth.

One Man Says the Town is All Right. Others Send in Opinions on Various Town Affairs. Boost and Criticism Column Proving Popular.

As Charlie Chaplin says: "We're here this week!" Two columns wide and full of life! We are wondering who is going to be the lucky winner of the ten dollars offered for the two best letters. Of course you know what the prizes are for—but in case you didn't see last week's issue—which you should have—here's the idea. Weymouth is a big town, it is full of good things and also has its faults—we all have—and the Gazette is offering:

$5 for the best letter showing what you believe Weymouth has most to be proud of to the extent of getting new people as residents, new business, etc. $5 for the best letter giving a good, just criticism of the affairs of the town, in our several departments, criticism in the manner of suggesting thus helping the voters of this town to see where leaks may occur in the doings of the business carried on by our several town boards and departments.

In your "boost" letters, the sky is the limit—use your imagination—see Weymouth as you think it will be in 1920 or 1925 or 1930. Boom your town—tell your neighbors, your fellow townspeople your ideas of the good points of the town, make it brief and to the point and end it in— you can't earn $5 much easier.

Below we are publishing several letters received this week. Don't be disappointed if yours isn't in this week, we haven't room for them all—but yours will get a chance later.

We want more letters—wake up—send in your opinions—your ideas are as good as the next fellow's. Write up a "boost" letter, don't always be knocking—send in a letter telling where your part of the town can be improved, benefited etc. Don't wait for your improvement societies to start everything, they want co-operation give them a lift—get your pencil or pen working—tell us what your ideas are—but don't fail to sign them—we have said before not for publication necessarily, but we must know ourselves who the writers are.

We reserve the right to reject the publication of any letters showing personal animosity toward any man etc., but we will consider all letters sent in—so open up—send in your views, this is to be your column, we want lots of "push," get up and show something. You have your own "dope" on what's going on, pass it along and help put Weymouth on a par with Quincy, Brockton and other centers in this section. Read these—then get busy!

Mr. Editor:

I hear lots of fault finding in my travels about town, on every conceivable subject pertaining to the town and many other affairs. Now Mr. Editor I don't think this town is as bad as some people try to make out. This town covers a large area, lots of this area is sparsely settled, and our revenue isn't as large as it should be to take care of everything in A-1 shape, just as we would desire to have it. Our street department, I think does well with its limited amount of money, our school system is to my mind in very good shape, the Police do everything they can under their appropriation and in this respect, the town doesn't have a great deal of crime. I can mention other departments that are doing all that can be done in their line, so why not brace up, boom Weymouth—tell of her natural advantages, help the Board of Trade and the Improvement Societies to boost Weymouth—don't always be knocking. I for one think my home town is all right—I'd like to hear from others in this line.

Mr. Editor:

I don't own an automobile, but I am wondering why the town of Braintree or the New York, New Haven and Hartford, if it is up to them, don't fix the grading around the crossing on Quincy avenue, East Braintree so an autoist won't nearly break his or her neck everytime they pass over this crossing. Just because a man owns a "gasoline buggy" doesn't make it necessary to make it as disagreeable as possible does it?

A Pedestrian.

Mr. Editor:

Here we have in the center of the town one of the most beautiful ball parks in New England, a park that is equal to any of the New England League grounds; located in a town full of enthusiastic ball fans, who would gladly pay a quarter admission to see a good ball game. Still we had the bleachers empty each week. There must be something wrong. Is it the management or where lies the blame? Who cares to go to a ball game when they do not take the trouble to even furnish an individual with a uniform? I think that the Clapp Memorial ought to be a credit to not only Weymouth, but to the state of Massachusetts, as well.

Respectfully,
Paul A. Smith.

Mr. Editor:

Let me just say a word in your columns this week about the many unsightly places in several parts of our town. There are places about town, some right in the center, some right in your section, Mr. Editor, which could be improved, and in some instances removed altogether. Weymouth, like lots of other towns, should anticipate many visitors in 1920 and 1923, preparation to make this a spotless town, should begin now. Let the Selectmen take up the matter and start something and cleanliness' sake don't put off cleaning and fixing until 1920.

"A Reader."

Mr. Editor:

In going about town it is very noticeable what an improvement has been made in the policing of the town, but for all of that, there is plenty of room for more improvement. Any pleasant Sunday you could see the State road between Fore River and Rock Beach, where a lot of drivers who should be classed as "unnecessary hurry up and pass him drivers"; who are determined to pass the safety first driver ahead, even if the street is not wide enough and maybe the state would help police that street if they were asked and all that would be required would be the presence of uniformed men at proper places to keep the line in order and if necessary some of the "pass him drivers" should be stopped and taken down a side street and after stopping his motor and removing his speed glasses he should be made to see what a beautiful place North Weymouth is and have it impressed on his mind that we do not want such a beautiful place all muddled up with a bad auto accident.

In conjunction with this it is safe to say that proper policing of this piece of road would more than pay for itself in the repair of it.

It is safe to say that very few of these drivers know that passing any of the side streets at anything but a very slow speed is improper and our County court ruled many times last term that there can be no defence in case of accident at these junctions if the car was running over 8 to 10 miles per hour.

"Safety First."

CHILD LOST.

Alarm at 9.30 Wednesday Night Calls Out Fire Department and Citizens.

Child Found Asleep in Tent.

The lost child alarm was sounded at 9.30 last Wednesday night calling the auto truck and crew to the vicinity of Lake street and Skelley avenue where a grief stricken mother was mourning for her lost 3 year old boy, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Aniello Russo who resides on the avenue.

The firemen with powerful lights searched the fields and forests nearby aided by scores of willing citizens. Meanwhile John Smith, next door neighbor, an employee of the water department peeked into a recently constructed tent in the hen yard of the Russo's and there beheld the "lost child" sound asleep.

Value of Peanuts.

A doctor is quoted as saying that a handful of peanuts eaten before retiring will quiet the nerves of the stomach. The same authority also claims that a few peanuts eaten after each meal will aid the digestion, provided they are freshly roasted.

LAWN PARTY FOR BOYS ON BORDER.

$200 Realized for Necessities and Luxuries to be Sent to Mexico.

About 500 people attended the lawn party for the benefit of the boys at the border which was held on the estate of Mrs. Helen M. Kelley, 376 East street, East Weymouth, last Thursday night.

The grounds were prettily decorated with varied colored lights and the booths were trimmed with the national colors. Each attendant, wore red, white and blue crepe paper hats. One of the many pretty effects was the sight of the barn which had been illuminated with green and red lights and the cabaret show was held there.

The midwa with its varied assortment of attractions was a very busy thoroughfare throughout the whole evening.

Dancing was enjoyed by the large crowd and the music was furnished by Pratt's orchestra. Misses Hazel Manuel and Bertha Hanson gave several exhibitions of fancy dancing.

The following were in charge of the tables: Dolls, Catherine Gaul, John Reid; Candy, Catherine Lyons, Robert McIntosh; Fancy Goods, Helen Cuniff, Helen Condrick; Ice Cream, Minnie O'Connor, Mae Sheehy; Thomas King; Grab Bag, Annie Kearns; Frankfurts, Edward Donovan. The flower girls were: Misses Margaret Steiner, Eleanor Brennan, Mary Fallon.

The committee in charge were: Mrs. Hilda M. Kelley, chairman; Misses Helen Griffin, Alice Cullen, Catherine Gaul, Helen Condrick, Mae Sheehy, Annie Conroy and Minnie O'Connor. About $200 was realized on the big event which will be spent on delicacies and life's necessities and sent to the local soldier boys.

King Cove Boat Club Ladies Auxiliary Entertains Large Gathering.

The Ladies Auxiliary to the King Cove Boat Club of North Weymouth held their annual Field Day and Sale last Saturday afternoon and evening. It was a most successful affair, the ladies netting at least $75. In the afternoon those who wished, enjoyed trips on the water. From 5.30 to 7.30 a buffet supper was served. The table were in charge of the following: Domestic table, Mrs. Grace Walker; parcel post table, Mrs. Chas. Abbott; Candy table, Mrs. Henry Miller and ice cream and tonics, Mrs. Edward Parker. The whole affair was in charge of Mrs. Lester Culley. During the evening a fine entertainment was given in charge of Mrs. Mildred Morgan. It consisted of a program of songs, readings and local hits in true minstrel style. The chorus was conducted by Mrs. Chas. Abbott dressed in the costume of Uncle Sam. Mrs. Prentiss and Mrs. John Wolfe as genuine black faces were presented with a large watermelon. Mrs. E. Russell Bailey was the accompanist.

W. R. C. Notes.

The executive board under the direction of the chairman Mrs. Charlotte Stoddard are to hold a sale and clam chowder dinner at King Cove Beach North Weymouth on an early date in August.

Past President Mrs. Baldwin was head usher, with Secretary Mrs. Bailey and Press Correspondent Mrs. Mahoney assisting at the Department reception Wednesday July 26.

One of the many pleasing features at the Plymouth County Association outing at Ridge Hill Grove Norwell was a comrade 93 years of age dancing two cotillions.

Birthday post cards are due Mrs. Elmira Nadell, who we are glad to report is gaining in health.

Sights Whale Down The Bay.

On Tuesday Edwin Culley went down the Bay to pull his lobster pots. When he was about to pull up the first pot he sighted a large object not far away. Watching it to see what it could be the object seemed to move and all at once he discovered it was a whale and quite a good sized one. Mr. Culley didn't bother with lobsters. He decided to leave the place at once without waiting for any arguments on rights.

New County Agricultural School.

Weymouth High School Selected for Associate Department. Enrollment Blanks Now Ready.

We received this week a well prepared prospectus of the new Norfolk County Agricultural School which is to be located in Walpole, with a sub department in the High school of the town of Weymouth.

At this time a brief history of the project will not be amiss.

The bill to establish the Norfolk County Agricultural School with a provision for a referendum was approved April 12, 1915.

The voters of the county accepted the act by a majority of more than 5000 at the succeeding state election.

May 6 of this year, the Trustees of which Charles L. Merritt, our Tree Warden and Mott Superintendent, is a member, voted unanimously to purchase the Ellis and Bullard properties in North Walpole, as a site for the school. This purchase includes a two-story dwelling house, a small barn, and about 40 acres of land, well adapted to the purposes of an agricultural school.

The school is to be under the joint control of the state and the county.

The purpose of the school is distinctly vocational, viz: to prepare its students in the most practical and scientific manner to be intelligent and efficient farmers. To this end specialists in the various departments of work will be appointed on the teaching staff. It must not be understood however that this school prepares students for the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

The old adage "Learn to do by doing," will be exemplified in this school. The home project work is to be a regular feature under the supervision of the teacher. Whatever specialty is chosen by the student, Fruit Growing, Market Gardening, Poultry Raising or Dairying, the fulfillment of the admission agreement signed by the student requires that he perform a sizable piece of farm work at home, at a neighbor's or on land at or near the school. Fifty percent of the time is to be given to farm practice, 30 percent to the class room and 20 percent to general subjects.

The school will be in session from 9 or 9.15 to 3 or 3.15 daily except Saturday. The course is planned for four years but each year's work will be complete in itself and no one desirous of attending the school should hesitate to apply because he can attend only one or two years.

SAVES BOY'S LIFE.

John G. Easton Rescues East Weymouth Lad From Drowning.

After being stuck in the mud for several minutes at the bottom of the reservoir into which he had dived, last Monday afternoon, 8 year old James Higgins of East Weymouth, was finally rescued and revived after a thrilling experience. It was necessary for rescuers to work more than an hour over the lad, before consciousness was restored.

Young Higgins, his brother, Edmund aged 12, and a number of companions were swimming in the reservoir near the Weymouth Light & Power Co's. plant. James dived from the wall of the reservoir and when he failed to appear after a reasonable time, his brother, Edmund jumped in after him. He found his brother stuck in the mud and all his attempts to extricate him were futile.

John Easton of Middle street, East Weymouth, a lineman, was working on a telephone pole nearby. "Jack" heard the cries of the boys and rapidly descended the pole and plunged into the reservoir, wrenching young Higgins free and bringing him to the surface. The boy, who had been at the bottom of the reservoir for several minutes, was apparently dead, but Easton procured a barrell and rolled the boy steadily, until others came to relieve him. Dr. Fred L. Doucette applied other measures and finally the boy showed signs of life.

On Wednesday afternoon James was playing ball with the other boys apparently in good condition. When asked as to his feelings when drowning he replied that he simply fell into a sleep.

Daily Thought.

If you can't pay for a thing, don't buy it. If you can't get paid for it, don't sell it. So you will have calm days, drowsy nights and all the good business you have now, and none of the bad.—Ruskin.

TWENTY-FOURTH OUTING.

Old Colony Grocers and Provision Dealers Enjoy Trip to Newport.

Have you discovered why your grocery and provision store was closed all day yesterday? Well, the reason you had to go without sugar, tea, etc., was the fact that the Old Colony Grocers and Provision Dealers all closed up shop and with their families, sweethearts and friends, went on the 24th annual outing, which was as near as we can learn, "the best in the association's history."

Special trains conveyed the grocers to Fall River, where a specially chartered steamboat "Warwick" carried the party on a two hour sail to Newport.

Band concerts, beach amusements, sports and shore dinners made up the program. The return trip was made at 5.15, the Weymouthers arriving home late in the evening. Everett Lord of East Weymouth was the only Weymouth grocer on the committee of arrangements.

JOHN A. RAYMOND, TOWN CLERK

Court Versus Committee Law

By ALAN HINSDALE

One night John Arbuckle, while peacefully sleeping in his home, surrounded by his family—a wife and several little children—was awakened by a loud rap at his door. Going downstairs, he opened the door and by the light of a full moon saw a dozen men, each man covering him with a revolver.

"What's become of your clerk, Tom Bowles?" asked the spokesman.

"I don't know. He left me without a word as to where he was going or why."

"That story won't go down with us. You were heard the day before he disappeared to accuse him of robbing you."

"I did not accuse him of any such thing. He was my bookkeeper, sales man and general utility man. He had so much to do that he got the books into a muddle. I was vexed and told him that he might as well have robbed me. As I said the two last words Cy Jenkins came into the store and heard them and saw me looking angrily at Tom. Afterward I apologized to Tom, and he seemed perfectly satisfied. The next day he disappeared."

"Very plausible," replied the spokesman. "How do you account for blood on a towel found in Bowles' room?"

"There's nothing in that. Bowles was cutting some meat for a customer and the knife struck his finger. He went to his room to stanch the blood."

"John Arbuckle, your explanations are mighty thin. You were heard accusing Tom Bowles of having robbed you. The next day he disappeared without a word of information as to where he was going. If you was in the eastern country where such cases as yours drag along for months, you'd probably get a lawyer who would prove that you never saw Bowles. In this country we take things as they are; there ain't no lawyers to throw dust in our eyes. Come along."

By this time Mrs. Arbuckle and the children had come downstairs and despite their clinging to the husband and father he was hurried away.

"I'll make you men pay for this," he said. "Every one of you."

"You'll have to come back from kingdom come to do it," was the cold reply.

They took their prisoner to a tree and were about to hang him when a man rode by and asked what was the charge against him. When told he said that about the time indicated he had met Bowles early one morning walking on a road leading southward. The informant couldn't remember the date, but he judged it was about a month before.

The committee had started in to hang a murderer and did not relish being turned from their purpose, but several of their members insisted on an investigation of Bowles having been seen going southward and after a long dispute it was determined to put him in jail till this could be done. He was therefore lodged in a cell and the committee went home to bed.

One would naturally suppose that these men who considered that justice rested on their shoulders would have taken the pains to send out in the direction Bowles had been seen going to make inquiries for him. But while they made it their business to dispense justice and gloried that there were no lawyers in the territory to delay them in doing so, no one of them seemed to consider it his business to hunt up the missing man. A week after they were bent on hanging Arbuckle they had so far cooled as to take very little interest in his case.

However, Mrs. Arbuckle placed her children in the care of a friend and, without announcing her intention, started out to hunt for the missing victim. She spent a good deal of time in her quest without immediate result. After being away from her little ones as long as she felt it practicable to leave them, she returned, bitterly disappointed.

Time passed. There was no trace of Bowles, but the thoughts of the vigilance committee had been turned into other channels and no movement was made to execute Arbuckle. Six months he remained in jail and would probably have remained till the crack of doom had not a court been organized to take the dispensation of justice out of the hands of a self constituted committee. When this occurred the prisoner's case was looked into, and since there was not sufficient evidence against him to warrant his trial he was discharged.

A few days later Bowles, accompanied by a wife, turned up, happy in being a bridegroom. He had been turned down by the bride, but she had relented and given him hope. He had gone for her, but being a modest man and fearing further disappointment had kept the reason for his going to himself.

The day after Bowles' return Arbuckle availed himself of the newly established court to bring suit for damages for false imprisonment against every one of the committee. Most of them had some means, and Arbuckle turned everything he had into money to pay his lawyers. Arbuckle won his suit and received a round sum from each and all who were able to pay. Those who were not able to pay he kept in jail two days for every one he had spent there himself.

Such was the ignominious end of the vigilance committee and the beginning of court law in a western city.

THE MAN WHO DIED TWICE.

Mystery of Jean, the Hairdresser of Marie Antoinette.

There are many puzzling features of French history, but perhaps the most puzzling of all, though it has to do with a comparatively minor personage, is that surrounding the mystery of the hairdresser of Marie Antoinette. It is not a common occurrence for a person to die twice, a circumstance which has occurred in the case of this hairdresser, who was known as Jean Antie, alias Leonard.

This Antie, or Leonard, was a Gascon, born in 1758, who acquired a reputation in Paris by reason of his great ingenuity in building the elaborate coiffures of the time of Louis XVI. In 1791 he was lodged at the Tuilleries as hairdresser of the queen.

When Marie Antoinette and the royal family made their fruitless attempt to flee from France, Leonard was sent ahead as a scout. He was seized, brought back to the French capital and condemned to be executed as a traitor to the state.

So far as any one then knew, he was duly decapitated, his death being properly recorded in the register provided for the purpose. Investigation has, however, elicited the interesting fact that the ex-hairdresser was very much alive in Russia in the year 1814, and to complicate matters the Paris register showed his second death certificate under the year 1820. The question naturally arises, just how did Leonard manage to evade the penalty that every one had no doubt he had suffered? A great many guesses have been ventured, and the following explanation, offered by one puzzled historian, seems of all of them the most reasonable:

One day while a group of condemned were awaiting their turn for execution the guillotine broke down and had to be repaired. A number of victims had been executed; ten or a dozen were obliged to stand waiting until the repairs had been accomplished.

It appears that one individual, the twentieth on the list, whose hands were, as was the custom, bound behind him, grew faint at the delay. He leaned against the line of officers that separated the prisoners from the mob of spectators. Suddenly a gap opened behind the man. Almost unconsciously he slipped through, and the line closed once more. A bystander reached over and placed a hat on the man's bare head, and the people crowded about as if to hide him. A short time thereafter a man with his hands behind him was seen in the Champs Elysees, walking with the air of one out for a quiet stroll. This man was said to have spent the next night in a ditch and to have made his way to Russia subsequently. If this person, saved by a fortunate accident or by collusion, was Leonard the story explains the mystery of the two death certificates.—Washington Star.

Roasting Coffee.

A good chunk of money can be saved in a year by roasting your own coffee, and it is not so hard at that. All that is needed is a good big heavy skillet. Before roasting a pound of green coffee put in a chunk of butter the size of an almond mixed with a teaspoonful of sugar. Roast on the stove or flame, steadily shaking and stirring in the old fashioned double shuffle way until all is a uniform rich brown. Shake fast when coffee "pops" or smokes. Please don't burn. The butter and sugar surely help the flavor, aroma and bouquet of the delicious drink. But the butter must be good and not too much used at one time. The smaller the quantity to do the job right the better.—New York Press.

Colors In Coral.

Genuine coral may be red, pink, white, blue, yellow, green or black, the last being the rarest and most highly prized. The next valuable is the red coral, which is susceptible of high polish and is most in use for jewelry, being the coral of commerce.

Corals are roughly classed under two heads, the horny corals and the lime or stone corals. To the former belong the red and black forms and the white to the latter. Red coral is chiefly found in the Mediterranean. The corals found on the Atlantic coast of Florida are the lime or stone corals, which are the reef building forms.

Bearded Freak.

One of the earliest of the American bearded freaks was Louis Jasper, who lived in southern Virginia at about the time of the close of the Revolutionary war. His beard was nine and a half feet long and correspondingly thick and heavy. He could take his mustache between his fingers and extend his arms to their full length and still the ends of the mustache were over a foot beyond his finger tips.—Exchange.

Deceitful Man.

"Didn't you think that was a beautiful girl with me today, Arthur?"
"What girl, my dearest?"
"Why, she was with me when you met us in front of the church."
"Was there a girl there, dear? I didn't notice. I was looking at you."
And then she loved him all the more.

Bad Outlook For Binks.

"What! Little Binks going to marry big, handsome Kate Blowitt. Why, she could carry him around in her pocket!"
"But she won't. He'll be out of pocket all the time after he marries her!"—Boston Transcript.

Just Supposing.

"Will you be my wife?"
"You must ask mother first."
"Yes, but suppose she doesn't refuse me?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

He who lives well is the best preacher.—Cervantes.

HISTORIC NOTES.

Death in France of Victor Chapman Brings Many Recollections to Older Weymouthites.

To the Editor of the Weymouth:

The notice of the tragic death of young Mr. Victor Chapman in France, which comes to us in a New York paper, will bring with it a quick sympathy from the older Weymouth people and a host of recollections associated with his family. The name Chapman must always have a peculiar interest and significance in Weymouth, connected as it is with her most famous daughter, where many were noted, the beautiful, brilliant and heroic woman who gave herself to the Anti-Slavery cause with such ardor in the time of national stress. Her fearless, loyal and generous spirit has again shone out in the personality and story of her great-grandson whose death in France in the Allies service is so widely deplored. He gave his life in a noble cause.

Readers of the modern essays of the Atlantic Monthly and the Transcript have always enjoyed from time to time trenchant and timely articles from the pen of John Jay Chapman, who is a grandson of Maria Weston Chapman, inheriting all her intellectual gifts and personal charms, and who is the father of the fine young spirit who has just given his life in France. The family home is on the Hudson River, though he has many Boston interests and well remembers the old Weston Home in Weymouth.

His volume of essays "Memories and Milestones" is notable in modern literature, and contains a wonderful pen portrait of Maria Weston.

John Jay Chapman is the son of Henry Chapman, who was very well known in Weymouth in his boyhood, and who was the special friend of young William Fildes. Henry Chapman was sent to Paris for education, and like all the family was under the eye of his celebrated kinsman Joshua Bates in London. Letters coming back to Weymouth in these far away days are of much local interest. Two, in the Library, written to William Fildes in 1848 are altogether charming boyish screeds, beginning "Dear Bill," and asking for news of the Weymouth friends and village affairs. They tell of the long visit to Joshua Bates' splendid home near Windsor, which was built on Sir William Temple's estate and had superb gardens. There were ponds and goldfish, deer in the royal park, a wonderful grapevine, and all the pretty sights of wealthy English life. At the school in Paris the boy "set my teeth hard to learn French," and like any other boy he sends back his love first to the dogs Fide and Sanche his own and William's, and then to the Weymouth friends. With these letters is one from Mr. Henry G. Chapman to Mrs. Emily Fildes (1903) from New York where with all the family devotion in a good cause he was carrying on efforts for good government, saying "I am so glad my father was one of your early friends." His friendship and memory was always cherished by the Fildes.

The story of Victor Chapman's death as told in the papers is extremely moving. He was but twenty-four, but already a distinguished member of the French aviation corps and had done good service. After a military flight he attempted an errand of mercy to a wounded comrade in a nearby hospital, was caught by the celebrated German flier Boelke and sent down to his death. His name was a family one, recalling the late Colonel Van der Weyer, grandson of Joshua Bates who died this spring, for whom Queen Victoria stood sponsor.

Mr. Chapman has written of his son, with a fine and characteristic courage, "I am resigned, I am proud that he joined the French army." But the shadow of the tragedy is very dark, nevertheless, one of the many to touch American families, and Weymouth, with deep interest will wish to add its word of appreciation and sympathy.

RIGHT or WRONG NUMBER?

The right way to call a telephone number is to consult the telephone directory, get the correct number, and then call for that number, clearly and distinctly, when the operator answers your signal. If you do not ask for the correct number you will be connected with the wrong number.

Have you ever noticed how the mind plays queer pranks with numbers in transposing figures? It will readily transpose 1468 into 1648, or 6426 into 6246.

If memory only is relied upon, there is always the likelihood of error, and valuable time is lost in correcting such errors.

If an old memorandum containing a number is used, there may have been a change since it was written or printed, therefore the telephone directory should be consulted whenever you wish to talk.

There can be no time saved by guessing—"hears" don't count; every wrong number call is an economic waste to the subscriber as well as to the company.

The wrong way creates annoyance to the person who is called by mistake; the right way saves delay and annoyance in completing your message, and it creates a high grade of service for you and for others.

If you cannot find the number in the telephone directory, ask for the "Information Operator" at the desired Central office. Her records are complete and up to the minute; she knows every new subscriber's number, every change of location as well as of number, and will start you right with the desired information.

America is Land of Woodland Waterfalls.

What of sylvan beauty rivals the waterfall of the woods? It is Nature's artistry in the highest. A million waterfalls grace this land, yet the charm of a single cascade defies the commonplace. The woodland waterfall with its shady glen is the restful retreat our dreams ever stage for our vacations. They babble their song of the open, by dozens and scores, to the automobile tourist.

To rouse the motorist to this beauty of nature within a week's tour from his home is the purpose of National Touring Week, the automobile vacation movement that has spread across the country from one coast to the other. During the week of August 6, 500,000 motor cars will tour the beauty spots and points of interest of the nation.

"See America first by seeing your own state first," is the golden text emblazoned in gigantic letters for National Touring Week. Nature has been prodigal with her beauties. The motorist who thinks he must go thousands of miles to the far-off country to find scenic beauty is harboring a hallucination. Get off the beaten trail with your automobile within your own state, and you will find a thousand wonders to delight the eye. Plan to spend your vacation in your motor car amidst the charms of your own home country.

This is the sermon, the inspiration, of National Touring Week. The idea has already caught the man at the wheel. Whoever thinks of automobiles is planning a vacation tour in a motor car. The momentum already gained by the movement will carry far beyond the official auto touring period, but all who have August vacations in prospect are fixing them to begin August 6th if possible.

To have a motor car and not use it for vacation pleasures is to trifle with the success of your outing.

For Grease Spots.

Balls made of fuller's earth and vinegar are good to keep on hand for removing grease spots from clothing and household material. Make a stiff paste of the fuller's earth and vinegar. Roll it into balls, and dry them. When a spot is to be removed dampen it and grate one of the balls over it. Leave this until it is dry, brush off the powder, and wash the mark with tepid water.

TRAVEL SKETCH.

Mr. Hawes Tells of Interesting Points of Exposition and Trip.

There is one building of which I ought not to omit making special mention, as, though built not upon the fair grounds but in the civic centre of the city, it played a very important part in the results sought to be accomplished in this bringing together of people from all over the world. Here assembled the greater part of the eight hundred congresses and conventions which convened during the progress of the fair. The building cost over a million dollars and when it had served the purpose of its erection it was to revert to the city of San Francisco. The main audience room of the building has a seating capacity of eleven thousand, beside which there are many rooms for smaller gatherings and committees. Here men and women from all parts of the United States and the world assembled for the consideration of many topics of human interest.

I think that the greatest influence for good which will go out from the Exposition of 1915 is the bringing together of people by thousands and tens of thousands from different parts of our own land and from other lands, thus knitting together more closely the bonds of human fellowship.

Here I must close my Exposition letter. I am conscious that I have come far short of doing justice to the subject. However if any of my friends find any pleasure in following these columns, and perhaps learn a few facts of which they were not before possessed, I am content. In my next letter I shall have something to say about the Russian River Valley; a section of California not commonly visited by tourists.

The canal and locks were faithfully represented with running water, with miniature vessels passing through the locks. A slowly moving platform, about twenty feet above the bottom of the amphitheatre and extending entirely around it was the means of conveyance by which I traversed both sides of the canal. This platform was about twelve feet in width and furnished with comfortable seats for the spectators, each of whom is furnished with a telephone receiver to apply to the ears and keep in that position the whole trip. The part of the lecture applicable to the section of the canal being passed, reached each one as he was passing that particular point. We start from the westerly side of the canal at its Pacific end passing in turn the several points of interest—the Miraflores and Peter Miguel locks near the Pacific end, the Culebra cut, where the land slides have taken place which have delayed so much the navigation of the canal, then the broad expanse of Gatun Lock and on to Colon; returning along the easterly side of the canal and landing safely after a half hour's trip at Panama. This object lesson was well adapted to convey a good idea of the gigantic work, the completion of which the Exposition was designed to celebrate.

Any attempt at portraying the wonders of the Exposition would be incomplete without alluding to the marvellously effective system of illumination. For lighting the streets of the states and foreign section, two hundred and fifty high pressure gas arc lamps are used. For the "Walled City" nine hundred electric arc lamps are used. These are also used throughout the grounds thirty thousands incandescent bulbs. With the exception of the Zone, where glare is a part of the effect sought, the electric lights are masked, or concealed, supplying a mellow radiance which is restful to the eyes.

In addition to the above, three hundred and forty-seven search lights, two hundred and fifty incandescent projectors for flag lighting and two hundred projectors of the locomotive headlight type for the illumination of statuary etc., are used. The cost for lighting was five hundred dollars a night. The reader can imagine, that if any one loved darkness rather than light they must needs go out of the Exposition grounds to find it.

With grounds of such ample dimensions, it may be asked, what facilities were afforded for getting from point to point?

No autos or horses were allowed within the grounds, but whether one wished to go a short distance or a long one he did not have to walk unless he chose to do so. The Overfair Railroad extends nearly the length of the grounds, over which you could ride for a dime. This is a narrow gauge road—about two and one half feet—operated by small engines drawing low, light cars, carrying about fifty passengers each. The Fudgi auto trains also operate the length of the grounds. These consist of a motor, drawing cars less than a foot from the ground, with the seats back to back. These motor trains are operated at a moderate speed upon the macadam roads. Wheel chairs were supplied to those wishing to use them, but these seemed not so popular as the electricquettes. These latter were small basket-work machines, designed to carry two, the basket-work coming nearly to the ground and concealing a storage battery which furnished the power by which the chair—for it is hardly more than that—is propelled. The operating device is very simple and can be mastered in a few minutes. The maximum speed of these little machines is about four miles an hour. They were rented at fifty cents an hour, or five dollars for the day.

O. C. Gas Co. Installing Calorimeter.

The Old Colony Gas Co. is installing a Hinman-Junkers calorimeter in their testing laboratory on Washington street, Weymouth. In co-operation with the State Board of Gas and Electric Commissioners a study will be made of the manufacture and distribution of gas under new standard conditions. The results of the Board's research work covering a period of six months will be of great interest to the public as well as the gas fraternity; as results are expected which will not only be of aid in giving a better service to the consumer but will also offset the rapidly increasing cost of materials by increasing the efficiency of manufacture.

Weymouth Experiences Going Back For Over Three Years.

Kidney weakness can be cured. But what caused it once will cause it again.

Here's a Weymouth man who has had several attacks.

Several times in over three years Mr. Fowler has used Doan's Kidney Pills.

He says that Doan's has never failed him.

Over three years ago Mr. Fowler publicly endorsed Doan's.

He now confirms his statement. What better proof of merit?

Proved by years of experience. Told by Weymouth people.

This is convincing testimony:

Peter Fowler, 17 Norfolk street, Weymouth, says: "I suffered severely from a lame back and my kidneys were irregular in action. Doan's Kidney Pills made my back strong and regulated the kidney action. I recommend them to anyone suffering from the trouble I had." (Statement given May 5th, 1913.)

A SECOND STATEMENT.

On May 21, 1915 Mr. Fowler said: "I have heavy lifting to do in my work, but I am free from any sign of weak kidneys. I use Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, however, and they keep my back strong and the action of my kidneys as it ought to be."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Fowler has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

He Who Shirks His Work.

The man who shirks his work, who treats the service of labor with indifference, who sacrifices his efficiency on the altar of self-indulgence, loafs on his job and plans to see how little he can do and not be caught, is to be the most pitied man on the face of the earth.

He thinks he is cheating his employer. But the employer is not the man he is cheating. Far from it. He is cheating himself. More than cheating himself, he is assassinating opportunity and paving the way to utter ruin and disgrace.

The man who cannot be trusted with labor for which he is honestly paid is just as despicable as the man who refuses to pay for labor honestly performed. The shirker is essentially dishonest. Unfaithful to himself, setting the bomb that will sooner or later send him to poverty, he is a menace and an abomination.—Dayton Journal.

Why Coins are Milled.

Did you ever look at the edge of a dime or quarter? They are different from pennies and nickels, for all silver and gold coin have what are called "milled" edges, while the edges of pennies and nickels are smooth. The reasons for this is that some dishonest persons used to clip pieces off the coins, especially the gold ones, and then sell these scraps of precious metal when they had saved a great many. Every year the nation lost large sums of money this way, and the thieves would smooth the edges off so well that it was hard to find out who was guilty. The best way of stopping this practice was found to be to "mill" the edges of the most valuable coins so that no one could pare them without letting it be seen at once.—Kansas City Star.

Two New York Streets.

The following information as to the widest and narrowest streets from curb to curb and from property line to property line is for the old city of New York, now the borough of Manhattan.

Rachel lane, near Grand street, between Goerck and Mangin streets, is one of the narrowest streets, having a width of ten feet between property lines. Delancey street, east of Norfolk street, has a width of 200 feet between property lines and is the widest street. Rachel lane has no sidewalks. Delancey street has a width of 145 feet between curbs.—New York Times.

Several feature stories and over 200 other items of interest in last week's Gazette! Who said there wasn't any doings in Weymouth?

Are you reading the "Criticism and Boost" column in this paper? Some good letters are published this week, more in the future. Send in your letters of comment and if you see one in the paper you wish to answer, send your answer along, we'll be glad to get it.

After the first spasm of announcing candidacies, politics in town have rather died down, but we hear that the several candidates are busy rounding up their forces in a quiet manner. With four men already in the field, it looks like a good exciting battle for the representative job this fall.

It was a year ago last Saturday that the Eastland tipped over in Chicago, the toll being 1200 innocent lives. A year has rolled away and we are pleased to note that officials are much more strict during this summer's cruising. Many boats have been condemned and scores have been carefully watched to see that no overloading occurs. Keep up the good work. Safety First.

The hearts of the Weymouth boys on the border at Mexico will be gladdened shortly now by the receipt of a large consignment of necessities and luxuries as the result of the grand success of the lawn party held for their benefit a few days ago. Mrs. Hilda Kelley and all her assistants gave their services absolutely without charge and a worthy cause was the beneficiary by $200. The boys at the Rio Grande will appreciate the kindness more than we can realize.

In another column in this issue we publish an up-to-the-minute story on the new agricultural school of Norfolk County at Walpole. In connection with the new school, Charles L. Merritt, a trustee of the county institution has secured the branch department for our local High school. As this is the only town to have a branch division, it behooves all agriculturally inclined pupils to carefully consider entering the new school and especially the Weymouth branch. Mr. Merritt and Mr. Pearson are especially desirous to know as soon as possible how many boys will take up this new course. See Mr. Merritt or Mr. Pearson at once and start the new school project in the right manner in this town.

A man prominent in state affairs, who has occasion to see a great deal of Weymouth as well as all other large Massachusetts towns, said to us the other day: "What is the matter with your town, you don't seem to go forward much. You have many fine points that should attract more business, more people, but records show a very small increase in nearly every desirable line, considering the size and location of Weymouth? What's the trouble?"

We confess that our answer to that man's question must have been rather vague—we couldn't tell him exactly what was the matter—can you now Mr. Reader? What is the matter with Weymouth? It is a big question, worthy of much thought and consideration. What does Weymouth lack to make itself like Brockton, Quincy and other bustling cities in our midst? As we believe our readers and the large body of citizens of the town have good up-to-the minute ideas on this subject, we started in last week's issue a "Boost, Boom and Criticism" column, not for the airing of any mans grievance against some town official or department, but to give everybody possible a clearer insight in the question of "what is the matter with Weymouth." In the boost column we want expressions of "what is not the matter with Weymouth," we want ideas as to why Weymouth is a good place to live in, to do business in, etc. We shall print as many letters as possible each week, answers to any letters appearing in the column will be considered, but we wish it understood that we are in no way responsible for the opinions expressed in this new column—we have our chance in this column every week. We feel that our townspeople will take hold of this new column with much enthusiasm and in the right spirit. Criticize justly, boom loudly and let us try to find out why so many people ask "What's the matter with Weymouth?"

—Mrs. Wm. Sweeney and children of Brookline are the guests of Mrs. Sweeney's parents Mr. and Mrs. James Williams.

—At the home of Henry Miller on Pratt avenue a fire occurred on Tuesday which narrowly approached a bad one. A lamp overturning on to a hot stove was the cause. Theodore Delorey who was working in the neighborhood answered the call of Mrs. Miller who was alone at the time and with rugs and water extinguished the blaze.

—R. F. Vining is having a two weeks vacation.

—Mrs. Dr. Wolfe and children are at Lake Winnepegaukee for two weeks.

—Aldridge Brown is at camp at Natick the guest of Mrs. Regan.

—At the weekly whist party at Wessagunsett Yacht club on Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Hutchins won first prize at bridge, Mrs. Pearson first prize at straight whist and Mrs. Walker the consolation. Mrs. Elliot was hostess for the afternoon.

—Mrs. Georgia Newton is the guest of her sister Mrs. Mary Cushing this week.

—Here is another fish story. One of the S. B.'s at the Bluffs a lady was about to go in bathing. She was sitting on the beach near the water's edge when suddenly a large school of fish rushed by right near the shore so that one jumped out of the water into her lap. They were about the size of small herring. The question is what was chasing them so near shore?

—Mrs. Frank Cushing and son Morgan Cushing of Meriden Conn. are the guests of Mrs. L. B. Curtiss.

—Miss Charlotte Arnold is spending the month of August with relatives on Saunders street.

—Last Saturday Mrs. Alexis Torrey celebrated her 84th birthday anniversary by entertaining F. H. Torrey and family, Stanley Torrey and family, Mrs. E. F. Beals, T. A. Bicknell and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clapp, at her summer home at Nantasket.

—The Hose Co. are doing some strenuous practising these nights so as to be able to get a prize in the hose reel contest tomorrow at the Fore River picnic.

—Geo. Ferrell of Wollaston was the dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Vining on Tuesday.

—Rev. J. J. Walker treasurer of the Mass. Home Missionary society will speak next Sunday morning at the Pilgrim church. His subject will be "Things pertaining to the Kingdom in Massachusetts." At the twilight lawn service next Sunday evening there will be two speakers from the Union Rescue Mission on Dover street Boston. Should the weather be unsuitable these services are held inside.

DO YOU

Think dog muzzling cruel and then marvel at the spread of rabies?

Carefully select your brand of liquor and then feed your children unpasteurized milk?

Repeat the Golden Rule and then sneeze in somebody's face?

Go camping for your health and then place your toilet so that it drains into your water supply?

Car Jumps Rails.

A serious accident was narrowly averted last Sunday night on Quincy avenue, East Braintree, when the car due at Weymouth Landing at 9.15 o'clock jumped the track side of the Old Colony Gas Co's. garage. The car nearly crashed into the big brick garage. As far as can be learned, no one was hurt.

Cause for Thankfulness.

We are to be thankful not for what makes life easy, but for what makes it great.

With the Boys on the Border.

Private W. Leo Draper, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Draper of High street, writes to his parents that he has gained 7 lbs. He penned the letter while resting on the bank of the Rio Grande, which is no wider than our Herring River and a dirty black water in which the Mexicans enjoy bathing.

The boys are gradually picking up a little of the Mexican lingo. Mr. Draper was led to believe that they would soon start homeward stopping off at Washington for a few days, but William Tosher in a letter to a friend says that he would not be surprised if they ate their Christmas dinners on the border. The boys hanker for their favorite brand of cigarettes regardless of what crusaders against this form of enjoyment say as to chocolates being preferred. Thomas McDonald has been released from the hospital where he was confined 4 days.

The thermometers register 130 degrees and there is no opportunity to take a plunge which makes the boys a bit homesick upon realizing the chances at home for relief from the terrific heat.

CARD OF THANKS

The Gazette is glad to add its mite to making the recent lawn party for the boys on the border a grand success, by publishing the following:

The committee in charge of the lawn party for the benefit of the fund to provide luxuries and necessities for the boys on the border wish to take this opportunity to thank all who in any way, small or large, assisted in making the event such a grand success, and especially appreciates the courtesy of the Weymouth Band in postponing the concert scheduled for the same evening to a later date

AUTO AND TEAM MEET.

Milk and Broken Bottles Decorate Washington Square.

Several bottles and considerable milk decorated the street in Washington square Weymouth last Monday morning when the buggy owned by B. P. Wormald, and loaded with a large box of milk in bottles came in collision with the ice cream delivery truck, driven by C. W. Marsh and owned by C. M. Price & Co. of Washington street, Weymouth. The buggy was tipped over, the rear wheel and axle were bent and the milk and broken bottles were distributed about the square. It is reported that Mr. Wormald had stopped to allow a State Milk Inspector to examine the milk. The auto truck was not damaged. With the aid of several bystanders with brooms, the broken glass was swept up and Mr. Wormald had his wagon taken to the repair shop.

ATTENTION BOYS!

Boys 14 years, or upward, whether High School or not, wishing to take the course in the Norfolk County Agricultural School Department in our High School this term in connection with the New Norfolk County Farm School, please communicate at once with C. L. MERRITT, trustee, of Main Street, South Weymouth, or to P. T. PEARSON, superintendent of school, at Weymouth Heights.

How a Snake Swallows a Frog.
The method of swallowing is a very simple one, although if the frog be large more than half an hour may be consumed in the process. The two bones of the lower jaw are separate and capable of independent movement, so the reptile loosens its hold upon one side of its jaw, and, pushing that side forward as far as possible, it drives the teeth in again and draws the jaw back to its original position. The result is that the prey is drawn down by the movement. The process is then repeated by the other half of the jaw, thus inevitably forcing the victim inward. The snake's skin stretches enormously, and the jaw is, of course, dislocated, but the extensible ligaments hold the bones together.

Gladiators.

The gladiators were originally male factors who fought for their lives or captives who fought for freedom. They were first exhibited at the funeral ceremonies of the Romans, 263 B. C., and afterward at festivals about 215 B. C. When Dacia was reduced by Trajan 1,000 gladiators fought at Rome for 123 days in celebration of his triumph. It is said that in the triumphs of Pompey the Great 10,000 fought through a series of many days. These combats were suppressed in the east by the Emperor Constantine about A. D. 325 and in the west by Theodoric in A. D. 500.

Pennsylvania Copper.

The copper produced in Pennsylvania is a by-product separated from magnetic ores of the Cornwell iron mine, in Lebanon county.

Neatly Turned.

An attorney, angered because of an adverse ruling by the judge, left the courtroom remarking to another lawyer that "the judge was an ass and shouldn't be on the bench." Before the case ended the judge heard of the remark and called the attorney before him. "I hear," he said, "that you called me an ass and said I ought not to be on the bench." "Sure," replied the quick-witted attorney. "Anybody with your profound knowledge of law is an ass to be on the bench. You ought to be practicing before the bar, where your talents could be cashed into big money."

What Is Good Rope.

Rope is sold by the pound, so there is always the temptation for a dishonest manufacturer to "load" his product with an excess of oil or other material or to make the coil a trifle short. The consumer then pays the full rope price for oil, etc. Then, too, much so called manilla contains a percentage of inferior fiber such as sisal and has neither the strength nor wearing qualities that it should. Tensile tests do not tell the story, for some of the adulterants are almost as strong as manilla, but the strength of poor rope falls off rapidly with use.

Open the strands and look at the inside of an old rope for signs of wear, as it wears faster there than on the outside. When a rope passes over the sheave of a block or around a cleat the strands slide a little on each other, and the inner fibers gradually pulverize.

Good manilla fiber is light colored, fine, silky and strong. Rope made from it is smooth, with few ends of fiber sticking out.—Outing.

Missed a Sale.

"It seems to me," said a Main street stationer, "that everybody's writing or dictating letters these days. Nine customers out of ten who come in here ask for postage stamps."

"This morning a woman was here browsing around. She looked over the entire stock. I thought I had a customer. After she finished the rounds she remarked: 'Oh, I nearly forgot. Have you any postage stamps?' I said yes and asked her how many she wanted. She handed me a wrapped newspaper and asked how much I thought it ought to have to carry it to its destination. I weighed the darned thing and told her a cent would be sufficient. 'Is that all?' she said. 'Well, I have a one cent stamp in my pocketbook. I thought it would come to more. Thank you very much.'"—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Elusive Zeppelins.

In his book "Zeppelins and Super-Zeppelins" R. P. Hearne points out the little known fact that it was a Frenchman named Spleen, an Alsatian, who about 1870 drew up a clever design for a rigid airship and made an attempt to patent it. In 1870 Count Zeppelin was a dashing soldier in Alsace, and Mr. Hearne thinks it more than likely that he saw Spleen's plans and annexed the idea.

The Zeppelin is a most elusive object despite its size. It can leap upward in the air at astonishing speed. It can drop rapidly. It can climb at a steep angle. It can dive wonderfully, and it can nose from side to side with no mean agility. To reckon its altitude at night is most difficult, and to find its range is a matter of much difficulty.

Full Supply of Hot Water.

While boring for oil near Port Elizabeth, South Africa, hot water was encountered in such volume at a depth of 3,600 feet that drilling operations ceased. The well has developed a never-failing supply, and the water has been found to contain pronounced medicinal properties to such an extent that baths have been constructed.

What a Cornet Did

A Story of War in East Prussia

By F. A. MITCHEL

O hark, O hark! How thin and clear
And thinner, clearer, farther going!
O sweet and far from cliff and scar
The horns of Elfin faintly blowing!
Blow, let us hear the purple glens replying;
Blow, bugle; answer, echoes, dying, dying, dying.

—Tennyson.

The killing and maiming of combatants are not all that is terrible in war. When the mailed fist is raised law, which has been the sole arbiter in the affairs of men, hides its face. The general commanding takes his place on the bench. But the general cannot even control his own troops. The victorious trooper frequently becomes a plunderer. When an army invades an enemy country those who have lived securely under the law flee before it as from an engulfing wave. And it matters not whether one is friend or foe; the soldier unrestrained by constant military discipline becomes a wild beast.

Paul Stanislaus, a Russian Pole, early developed a taste for music. When but eighteen years of age, being very poor, in order to make a living he enlisted in the band of a regiment stationed at Warsaw. The instrument he played was the cornet. At this he became so proficient that when the band played in the public gardens he was frequently selected to play a solo.

On one occasion when the band was playing the national hymn at a ceremony attending the reception of the czar Paul led with his cornet. His instrument, accompanied by a hundred other pieces, rang out in such clear and inspiring tones that the emperor's admiration was excited, and he sent the musician a present of 100 rubles.

When Paul Stanislaus left the band he took his instrument with him, and many a time some ceremony was made impressive by his rendition of the national anthem. Then would the Pole forget the dismemberment of his nation or dream of the day when its three parts—Austrian, German and Russian—would be again united under one independent government.

Stanislaus drifted northward and finally married and settled down within the border of East Prussia. There he worked a little farm, but so great a portion of the year was given to winter that there was not much time left in which to grow farm products, and there was little profit.

A family grew up about him. His wife was a good manager and made the most of the scanty income. Little by little, year by year, she added something to the family comforts, and what she and her husband had not money to pay for they made with their own hands. When a child was born to them Paul would add an additional room to his little home, and in time there were six of these additions nestling up against the central building like so many chicks against the mother hen.

Then, too, there were frequent additions to the furniture. Paul was handy with tools, and, though he had never learned the trade, he was no mean cabinetmaker. Now it was a bed, now a crib, or, rather, a bunk for one of his children, now an easy chair, all made out of plain material, but strong and not rough. And as for quilts, the wife was as apt at saving odds and ends for the purpose as patching them together.

In this way the nest grew in size and in comfort, though so slow was the process that it was like the hands of a clock that are not seen to move. Paul and his wife loved their home because they had not received it all finished at the hands of some generous giver, but had made it all themselves through a term of years. As for the children, they loved it for the best reason in the world—because it was home.

There had been when the property was bought a small mortgage on it. From the first the couple put aside a certain sum each year, if it were only 20 rubles ($10), and slowly during a long term of years they had seen the amount they owed becoming smaller. At last it was reduced to 100 rubles, then 50, then 10. When the last 10 rubles were paid the couple invited their intimate friends to sup with them, and when all were ranged around the table Paul took the mortgage document and burned it before them. Then all drank health and prosperity to the happy family who owned their home and everything in it.

Amid the rejoicing a horseman rode up to the door and cried out:

"Are there any reservists here?"
"No. Why do you ask?"
"The kaiser has declared war against Russia, and all reservists of the first line are called to the colors."

The happiness of the Stanislaus family was turned to anxiety. They were Russian Poles living in Germany. The boys were too young for military service, and the father was beyond the age for first line troops. But they lived on the border, on German territory, and the tide of battle was liable to sweep over them.

Day after day spark after spark lit new flames. Russia declared war against Germany. France, as Russia's ally, did the same. Germany hurried across the border into Belgium, which drew England into the fray. All was preparation, while troops were being moved to points for defense or attack. Germany, having buried its first strength westward, gave the slow moving Russians on the east time to concentrate and take the offensive.

Then came the Russian drive into East Prussia. The army, a vast horde, crossed the line by a route leading directly toward the Stanislaus home. On they came with fire and sword, accompanied by the thunder of their guns.

"We shall be swept away before the hurricane!" cried Stanislaus. "All we have been gathering for so many years will be lost."

"You are a Russian subject," said his wife. "You have been musician in a Russian regiment. Can you not make them understand this?"

"We will be overrun by stragglers and pillagers. They will have no mercy."

One morning the devastating horde reached the Stanislaus home. They were moving to attack the Germans farther within the border. There was no fighting, but one wing of the army passed down a road not a hundred yards from the Stanislaus' home. A number of men bent on looting, seeking the comfortable looking house, with its additions and a vegetable garden beside it, broke away from the column and scudded along, bending low to the ground so as to escape detection by their officers. The family saw them coming. The father seized a gun, but put it back. The mother fell on her knees and began to pray. The children wrung their hands, and some of them sought places in which to hide. A dozen men entered the house and began to appropriate everything in sight. They were a savage lot, and soon all thought of what they were taking was overtopped by the occupants' fear that they would be murdered.

Stanislaus believed that if he could attract the attention of an officer he might secure protection. He started out for the purpose, but one of the troopers, probably realizing his intention, hurried him back.

Stanislaus' cornet, on which he had played when a member of a Russian military band, hung on the wall over a fireplace. An idea occurred to him for calling for assistance. Seizing the instrument, he began to play the Russian national anthem. Clear and solemn, the beautiful air rang out, passed through the open door, its vibrations sweeping over the land far and near.

At the first notes off came the head covering of every pillager. Then they began to drop such plunder as they held in their hands; then they unloaded their pockets, all the while their heads bowed reverently.

A general riding at the head of his staff reined in his horse and listened. A brass instrument needs distance. It is "thin and clear" when heard from afar, and its harsher tones are softened. The general recognized the hymn of his fatherland. He doffed his hat. His staff followed his example. Men marching in the ranks, hearing the hymn and seeing the general uncovered, took off their hats. When the last notes died away he said:

"There is only one man who can play the hymn as it has been played, that is Paul Stanislaus of the old 14th regiment, in which I was once a captain."

Then, turning his horse's head toward the house from which the sounds emanated, he rode thither, followed by his staff.

The looters saw him coming, and by the time he reached the door they were standing at attention before it, dreading his wrath.

"Paul Stanislaus, where are you?"
"Here, general!"

Stanislaus, his cornet in his hand, came out of the house and saluted.

"Do you recognize me?" asked the general.

"No, general."

"I have heard you play that anthem many a time when I was an officer of the 14th regiment of the line at Warsaw and was present when you played it before the czar, and he sent you a gift. As soon as I heard it just now I knew that you were the musician."

"Many years have passed since I was one of the band of the 14th, general. We have changed."

"Why did you just play it?"

"To call an officer. I need protection."

The general understood and looked at the men who stood trembling before him. He ordered one of his staff to march them away, then dismounted and went into the house. Seeing the confusion, he knew what had occurred. A table, on which were writing materials, stood near, and approaching it he wrote a safeguard which he handed to Stanislaus. Then he asked him to stand in front of the house and play again the Russian hymn.

Stanislaus did as requested, and as regiment after regiment marched past on the road below each burst into song, above which rang the clear tones of the cornet. When the anthem had been repeated again and again the general said to Stanislaus:

"You may be too old to fight, but you are not too old to inspire others to fight by the soul you put into music. Here are a hundred rubles to make up for the ruin done by these pillagers, who, I promise you, shall be severely punished. After you have repaired the damage done by them I desire that you follow the army and join me wherever I may be. You shall be with me at my headquarters, and before we go into battle you shall breathe the love of the fatherland into the souls of my men. I as their general am expected to inspire them to deeds of valor, but were I the god of war himself I could not move them as you can move them by the power of song."

While the general was speaking these words Stanislaus and his family stood in respectful attention. When he had finished he put spurs to his horse and rode on.

Then father, mother and children clung to one another in an embrace. Then they all fell on their knees and gave thanks. Then—they began to clean up.

Feeding pens for the little chicks will be necessary in order to prevent injury to them by the older fowls.

If you do not intend to use hens for hatching, break them up at once and get them to laying again.

When the new canes of the raspberries are two and one-half feet high clip back the tips to check the upward growth. This will insure stocky canes and low branching of the laterals. Cut out the bearing canes after harvesting the fruit to prevent the spread of raspberry scab.

Slaked lime is about the best, safest and cheapest of all the remedies for the various bugs that infest the vine crops. If you have early squash vines you have something that will act as a good trap. Keep the bugs killed on these vines and they will not be present in such numbers later. The lime should be air slaked, of course.

The handiest bird to manipulate commercially is the pigeon. Anyone for pleasure or profit can engage in the business in the most restricted quarters. Squabs are a year-round crop, and the industry is on a sound basis.

Do not forget that in the composition of an egg there is a great proportion of water and the laying hen cannot produce eggs unless she has all the water she wants, and at the time she wants it.

To prevent hens from eating their eggs arrange a false bottom in the nest, through which the egg will roll slowly out of sight when laid. There are several ways of doing this. By making the nests dark the formation of this habit will be prevented.

Guard against the formation of egg-eating habits by giving the fowls plenty of lime, oyster shells, bone or similar substances to insure a firm shell upon the eggs.

Rip out two-thirds of the plants in the strawberry bed if you wish to have profitable plants next year. A two-horse cultivator runs both ways through the bed leaves about the right number. You may say there will be no plants left, but you will find plenty this fall. If you can catch a rainy time in August set out thirty strawberry plants and usually they will live and be ready to bear next year. Plants so set should be set immediately in the ground after being taken up. For this reason they cannot be shipped from a distance at this time of year.

Mustard and cayenne peppers are splendid condiments that will help to keep the appetites of your flock up to high pitch. To get the best results with hens as winter layers, it is necessary to make them eat as much as possible. Anything that will cause them to eat more will help to produce eggs. Do not feed either mustard or pepper too freely, but used with moderation either will be beneficial. Mustard is so easily produced there no need of neglecting it. Grow the white variety. The peppers require more work, as they have to be grown with more care. Start the seeds in boxes or hotbeds early, and transplant to the garden when the weather is warm.

The souring of milk adds nothing in the way of feeding value or digestibility to milk, consequently the best way is to feed directly from the separator. Skim milk is a feed high in its content of protein, and should be fed in combination with starchy grain, such as corn, at the rate of 1 to 3 pounds of skim milk to 1 pound of corn meal, depending upon the amount of milk available and the age of the pigs. The skim milk will have the greatest feeding value when used in combination with corn or other similar grain within the proportions above noted.

An animal in some ways resembles a river, which is the result of the combining of many streams. The animal is the result of the combining of the blood lines of parents, grandparents, great-grandparents, and so on. If one of the streams is muddy, though the rest be clean, the whole river becomes murky, and likewise one poor ancestor will weaken the animal. That is why pedigrees are kept. They do for the animal what keeping the muddy stream from flowing into the river does for the river. The pure-bred is the result of careful selection and use of the animal's with strong points and just as careful an elimination of those that could not add strength or quality.

Every pound of wheat requires an average of 450 to 500 pounds of water to carry it from planting to maturity. Early plowing and frequent working of the seed bed helps to retain soil moisture. A light harrowing or disking early in the spring cultivates the wheat and forms a soil mulch that prevents the escape of winter rains so needed by the wheat when filling and ripening. Experiment stations have found that wheat, well supplied with available plant food or growing on rich soils, can produce a bigger crop with less moisture than it can on a poor soil or on one not well supplied with available plant food. Wheat on rich soils continues to grow even if the supply of moisture is scanty. Supplying available plant food to wheat enables it to produce larger yields on the same amount of water. This is especially important when the rainfall is below normal.

Fable of Two Maidens.
Once there were two maidens who sought to catch a nice young man, and it was a false start in the eyes of the undiscerning, for the one was exceedingly fair to look upon and dressed stylishly, while the other was plain of countenance.

The pretty girl smiled sweetly on the nice young man and talked to him till she dazzled him with her beauty and harmed him with her wit. The plain one gazed wonderingly at him and made him talk to her of divers things, while she listened, entranced at his wisdom and learning.

He took the pretty girl out riding, to the theater and bought her chocolates and flowers, and all the knowing ones said she had struck a winner, when one day he married the plain girl and took her on the continent for their honeymoon.

The pretty girl had made him very much pleased with her, but the plain girl had gone one better and made him very much more pleased with himself.

Moral.—The people who read human nature as they run generally get first to the wire.—Pearson's.

Going Without Food.

Science says that if he can get drinking water an ordinary man can exist for about thirty days without food. At the end of that time the machinery of the body will not be ruined and can be entirely strengthened back to its old standard by careful feeding. About one-quarter of our body weight is fat, and it is mostly this fat which is absorbed as food during the period of starvation. We can absorb and burn up our muscles until 60 per cent of their weight has gone. We can do the same with from 30 to 40 per cent of our liver and digestive organs and 20 per cent of our lungs. Our hearts can lose 10 per cent, and our brains and nervous system can lose 5 per cent. It will thus be seen that the more vital organs, brain and heart, yield least of their valuable substance for the life of the body, while the less valuable substances—fat, muscles, and so on—are consumed first.—New York American.

Novel Methods of Warfare.

In ancient history there are two well authenticated instances of wild animals being used by attacking armies. The first is related by Apollonius when describing the siege of Themisseyra, in Pontus, by Lucullus in his war against Mithridates. Turrets were brought up, mounds were built and huge mines were made by the Romans. The people of Themisseyra dug open these mines from above and through the holes cast down upon the workmen bears and other wild animals, together with swarms of bees. The second instance occurred in England when the Danes and Norwegians were attacking Chester, held by the Saxons and some Galle auxiliaries. After adopting stoning and boiling water defenses in vain against the besiegers the Saxons threw down all the beehives in the town upon the attackers, who were soon routed.

Powers of Sheikh ul Islam.

The office of sheik ul Islam—literally chief or ancient of Islam—ranks second only to that of sultan in the Ottoman empire. Its holder is ecclesiastical head of the empire and supreme interpreter of the Koran, with absolute control over all imams, dervishes and religious institutions, but he has judicial and political authority also, being, indeed, first magistrate, privy seal and minister for education. In some respects the sheik ul Islam is superior even to the sultan, for his edicts are irrevocable. The sultan may dismiss him before he issues an edict, but the edict once issued takes automatic legal effect, even though, as happened in the case of Abdul Hamid, it decrees the deposition of the sultan himself.

Just by Good Luck.

A young man who had received the privilege of shooting over the land of a farmer got rather close once or twice to the home grounds. Late in the day he met the farmer.

"You've had pretty good luck," said the farmer.

"Well, no," said the young man hesitatingly. "I haven't had any luck at all."

"Yes, you have," repeated the farmer. "This morning you just missed my best Shorthorn."—Country Gentleman.

Sufficient.

Him—Darling, I would ask you to be my wife, but I'm afraid my income of only $2,000 a year would not be sufficient for us to get along on. Her—Oh, yes; it would. I can dress on $1,500 a year, and we would have all the rest for our living and household expenses. —Indianapolis Star.

Business Instinct.

The following epitaph may be seen in the cemetery of a parish in the environs of Paris:

"Here lies Mme. N., wife of M. N., master blacksmith. The railing round this tomb was manufactured by her husband."

Then She Wiggled Him.

Wife (with newspaper)—It says here that men grow bald because of the intense activity of their brains. Hub—Exactly. And women have no whiskers because of the intense activity of their chins.

Shingle Roofs.
There is a definite record of an early use of shingles for roofing in England in pre-Norman times. At that time this method of making roofs was common. The shingles were thin pieces of split wood, usually oak. Many old examples still exist in England, especially on the wooden towers and spires of East Anglia.

A Careful Woman.
Mrs. Talkalot—What I have just told you is a very great secret. It was told to me in the strictest confidence. I must caution you against repeating it. Miss Cautique—I shall endeavor to be just as cautious as you are.—Philadelphia Record.

Big Brazilians.

The average height of the Bororos, who live in the southwest of Brazil, is six feet four inches. They are the tallest people in the world.

Domestic Joy.

"You were always a faultfinder!" growled the wife.

"Yes, dear," responded the husband meekly. "I found you."

The great soul that sits on the throne of the universe is not, never was and never will be in a hurry.—Timothy Titcomb.

His Gratitude.

A collector of subscriptions for the brass-band fund once came across a farmer who was noted for his meanness. To his surprise the farmer at once consented to subscribe fully as large a sum as any he had yet received. "Mr. Hardist," he said, addressing the farmer, "you are surely very fond of music, to give so much?"

"Oh, yes," said the farmer; "they're grand for scaring the crows from matins when they're practicin', an' I'm grateful."—London Tit-Bits.
